Italian Congress

The Italian syndicalists recently held their first congress at Ferrara. The government certainly did its best to stimulate the zeal of the members by cases of petty tyranny.

There were reported as represented twenty-five branches of the young Socialist youths' organizations, representing 10 members, 15 syndicalist groups with 1,387 members, 35 party branches with 1,450 members, and 493 trades unions with 96,983 members.

Repudiated the Authority

The syndicalists, however, repudiated the authority of the party executive as a biased tribunal and requested a special congress of their own, friends to deal with the matter.

WILL CLEAR THE AIR

This decision, inasmuch as it brings an end to a bitter controversy within the ranks of the Italian party, will probably be good. It will tend to clear the air, and the syndicalists themselves, including those who support revolutionary action—an antagonism which brought on a heated debate at this congress.

Marvelous Results Accomplished. James C. Williams, an attorney of Kansas City and a stockholder in the Chicago Daily Socialist, was in the city yesterday.

Poets and Scribes to Have a Big Day Off. Riverview park, which has a habit of dealing in superlative terms, will have another "est" to use Saturday, for it is safe to say that on that day it will have confined within its walls more poets and other wild creatures from Mt. Olympus than any other amusement park in the world.

Saturday will be Press Club day at Riverview and the Press club of Chicago will be turned loose therein. There will be bardic there writing sonnets to the girls in the Navassar band between numbers, and the entertaining spectacle of William Ligtfoot's "The Velvet Carpet" will be witnessed.

Colonel Visscher is one of the best shot in the club. The pencil pushers will flock to see the desperadoes plunder the frightened supers; that is, if they can be dragged away from Salome or Neptune's daughter.

Wilbur Nesbit is expected to crack jokes in Big Otto's and the other members of the club who are authorities on mothers-in-law will visit the Erickson family circus to see if mother-in-law started this one, as she generally does.

At 4 p. m. Elmer Flower will give an exhibition of grace in riding the figure eight.

"Wots a kilowatt?" will be answered at the Electric theater. At the Battle camp of Santiago Rico, the wild animal show over $500, and without great effort, he made to reach $1,000.

Other concessions, if we can put over 10,000 of our tickets into the box that day, will bring the Daily another neat sum.

There will also be a theater to hold 4,000 people.

HOW EMPLOYERS' ASSOCIATION HOUNDS UNION WOODWORKERS

For the third time in the same number of weeks the strikebound Theodore Koehs Barber Supply Manufacturing Company, Erie and Wells streets, today laid its hands on an injunction against Judge Blake in the East Chicago avenue police station.

On Friday, Aug. 2, John Lind and Joseph Manofski, striking woodworkers, were arrested at the instigation of the company, charged with assault on a strikebreaker. Having tried this same dodge and been defeated in the same court about ten days ago, the company decided to make or break on the present cases and changed tactics this morning.

Asks for Time. A continuance was asked and secured. Tomorrow the men will be tried on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon. "Riot" warrants were taken out this morning and served on Lind and Manofski as they left the courtroom.

The postponement was asked for by an attorney representing the Employers' Association. From all indications the antagonistic employing interests of Chicago will join with the Koehs company in an endeavor to substantiate trumped-up charges against the strikers.

RAILROADS HAVE THE SYMPATHY OF WASH., D. C.

It Was Not the Intention to Have Them Indicted for Rebate Doings

The administration is alleged to be sorry that Judge Landis has ordered a special grand jury to investigate the Chicago & Alton railroad, on the ground that it is not a part of the government's program to indict railroads after they have been instrumental in furnishing evidence upon which indictments against the Standard Oil Company were secured.

How much truth there is in the story of governmental disapproval remains to be seen. This does not mean that any sympathy is expressed by the government for the trust, but it is merely regretted that the railroads which have befriended the administration in certain ways must now be haled before the court.

U. S. OFFICIALS NOT IN TOWN; A SECRET? Believed They Are Seeking Evidence to Be Used in Trust Busting

United States Attorneys Sims and Wilkerson, who conduct the Standard Oil prosecution and have charge of the other cases pending against that corporation, left Chicago last night. Their destination and present whereabouts are carefully guarded as a secret.

Acting District Attorney Childs is directing the empanelling of the grand jury to consider further evidence in rebate cases. He refuses to disclose anything concerning the movements of his associates.

Special Counsel Morrison, who is conducting the litigation against the Waters-Pierce alleged branch of the Standard Oil in St. Louis, had a conference with Childs, the subject, which lasted an hour's discussion, was also kept secret. It is believed the district attorney's office is marshaling its forces for a grand onslaught on trust interests of the central western states.

JUDGE LANDIS BUSTS SEATING COMBINE

Puts Kibosh on American Seating and Chair Manufacturers' "Tooi"

Judge Landis of the United States court, he of mountain fame and 329 fine distinction, resumed his role of trust buster yesterday and proceeded to put out of business the furniture combine, which has been selling chairs and seats to churches and schools under the program that brings it in bad repute in the eyes of the law. The court had imposed fines of $10,000 and costs on the following:

American Seating company, A. H. American Seating Superior Manufacturing company, Illinois Refrigerator company, Peabody School Furniture company, Haney School Furniture company, Hudson School Furniture company, Owensboro Seating company, Minneapolis Office and School Furniture company, Southern Seating and Cabinet company, Cincinnati Seating company, Fridman Seating company, H. C. Wright Seating company and Frederick A. Holbrook, "moving spirit."

The order of the court entered yesterday puts the combine out of business because if it dares show its hand again the members will be held for a penal charge for contempt of court.

Thus the trust busting Landis is doing more than all the theorists at Washington have accomplished in years of chatter and bragging. Of course the country soon will be good and happy.

JACK TARS WANT CAPS AND COATS LIKE REAL MEN

Tired of Childish Low-Necked Blouses and Tam o' Shanter Headpiece

(By United Press Association.) New York, Aug. 7.—Jack Tar wants a coat and a visored cap. He expects to get them, too.

The men behind the guns in Uncle Sam's navy think it is present uniform is not natty enough and they have raised such a wall of protests against their panache caps, wide collared blouses and flaring trousers that the navy department has started an investigation.

A committee headed by Capt. Osterhouse of the battleship Connecticut is now wrestling with the subject. The sailors are jealous of the marines. They say the caps are useless. They are hard to keep on the head and give no protection against the sun. The marines' caps are better. Then the blouses, too, are flabby.

The wide collars flap about the ears and the necks are too low. Jack is tired of a constant decollete and wants a coat. When the uniform is changed, they say it will make it easier for the government to secure naval recruits.

UNION LABOR BANK ORGANIZED

(Mail Correspondence.) Canadian, I. T., Aug. 7.—Articles of incorporation were filed recently with Secretary Filson for the Co-operative Bank and Trust company of Oklahoma City, with $500,000 capital stock.

The directors are: Cephas Miller; Seward; W. J. Clarke; Okarche; E. A. Bowerman; and B. C. Henson; Shawnee; J. L. Vaughn; Krebs; I. T. Object, to conduct a general banking business in Oklahoma.

The promoters assert that the institution is to be made strictly a union labor concern, and they hope to draw the financial support of the labor unions and farmers' union of the two territories.

The five members of the board of directors are all prominent members of the farmers' union or of established labor union, and the subscriptions for the stock are confined exclusively to members of labor unions, according to the statement of W. L. Clark, the president of the company, and Cephas Miller, the treasurer.

The incorporators are: W. J. Clark, Okarche, chairman of the state executive committee of the farmers' union; B. C. Henson, Shawnee, secretary of the farmers' union; Cephas Miller, Seward; E. A. Bowerman, Shawnee, a prominent member of the central trades assembly of that city, and J. L. Vaughn of Krebs, I. T., a member of the Southwestern Miners' association.

W. L. Clark of Okarche has been elected president, B. C. Henson of Shawnee secretary, and Cephas Miller of Seward treasurer of the proposed institution.

The $500,000 capital stock $200,000 had been subscribed at the time of the signing of the articles of incorporation, according to the declaration contained in the instrument.

"We expect that the institution will be largely patronized and supported by the farmers' union and the organized labor of the territories," said President Clark.

"We expect to make the institution in reality a union labor bank. The employees and officers will all be members in good standing of labor unions. No stock will be sold except to union members, and an especially large amount of interest and accommodation union men."

"We expect to have the emblems of the different labor unions placed at all convenient points on our building, on the furniture and on the fixtures. We will also use the labels of the different unions on all our literature, checks, certificates of deposit, drafts and stock certificates. Our bank will be a union bank and run in their interests."

BIG BIZ ASKS BIZ FOR BUSSE'S BIZ

Combination in Black Diamonds Boosted by Mail—Mayor as a Coal Salesman

Mayor Fred A. Busse, executive of the great city of Chicago, as has been announced, has sold his coal business and the Busse Coal Company, of which he is president, to the Peabody Coal Company, and at the same time has made to the Peabody Coal Company the public to stand by the Peabody and give it orders and other goods of this world.

The mayor's letter would be taken a trifle humorously were it not for the fact that the communication may be regarded very much in the nature of a court command—buy coal from these people or don't come around for any political favors, or other favors, d'ye hear?

The important facts as follows: "My official duties so fully occupy my time that I have decided that it is impossible for me to continue in active private business and do justice to the city's affairs; therefore, I have arranged with the Peabody Coal Company to take over my business on Aug. 1 and have sold them the horses, wagons, stock of coal and fixtures of the Busse Coal Company."

"I believe that the facilities of the Peabody Coal Company are such that my customers will not suffer in the transfer and that their interest will be as well taken care of as they have been heretofore."

"I will regard it as a personal favor if you will give the Peabody Coal Company the same generous patronage that the Busse Coal Company has heretofore enjoyed."

"Thanking you for past favors, I am very truly yours, 'FRED A. BUSSE.'"

It is commonly understood that Mayor Busse is a large stockholder in the Peabody Coal Company. In fact, the inference is plain that he is more deeply interested in the Peabody than mere business comity suggested by his letter would indicate.

The Peabody company with the same letter sent by Mayor Busse, enclosed a card which announced the transfer and card which will become effective Aug. 1. In classic phrase it begins thus: "Effective Aug. 1, we have assumed," etc. Oh, Big Biz is business!

STOCK BROKER LOSES AND KILLS SELF AT CLUB

New York, Aug. 7.—Heavy losses in Wall street and a despondency from brooding over his suspension from the stock exchange, where he had been a member for thirty years, are assigned today as the reasons for the suicide of William B. Alley, who shot himself at the Larchmont Yacht club last night. Alley died on his way to a hospital.

The members of the club were crowded with pizzas, their wives and daughters at dinner when Alley killed himself. The sound of a revolver created a panic among the visitors. Men who rushed to his room found the door locked. It was forced open and Alley, with a wound in his right temple, was discovered with one chamber empty was on the floor.

ALLEGED BANK LOOTER IS OUT OF JAIL AND FREE

Banker William J. Atkinson walked forth from the jail today a free man. He has been held in lieu of $25,000 bonds for six months pending an investigation in bankruptcy into his management of the defunct Lincoln bank at Morton Park, Ill. Atkinson deposited as a private one. It is alleged depositors lost $63,000. Atkinson promoted the Waukesha Water Company and through its financial difficulties lost large sums of money. He was retained as a witness until Judge Landis granted the order that became effective today.

Want Uncle Sam to Control Private Sleuths; Curb Detectives

New York, Aug. 7.—Advisability of asking congress, through the American Federation of Labor, to enact legislation for federal control of detective agencies is being considered by the Central Federated Union.

The subject came up after several delegates had spoken on the Haywood acquittal. After they had told of the part played by the Pinkertons in the struggle between the Western Federation of Miners and the mine owners, James Barry, delegate from the Actors' Union, asserted Pinkerton detectives had sent many an innocent man to the gallows on manufactured evidence and that something ought to be done to curb the Pinkertons in their underhand methods.

Honeycombed With "Pinks" "The labor organizations of the country," asserted Barry, "are honeycombed with Pinkerton detectives, who sit in their meetings and then carry the news to the employers of the union men. We have Pinkerton men sitting in our own meetings and I'd wager there are a few at the back of this room now. If we must have secret service men among us, let us have their conduct regulated by some responsible power."

"I think the Central Federated Union ought to ask the American Federation of Labor in its next national convention to petition congress to enact a law that would place all detective agencies under federal control. I believe that is the only method by which the contemptible work by the agencies in favor of the capitalists can be stopped."

Standard Oil Back Of It. That the Standard Oil Company and its allied interests were back of the prosecution which sought to convict Haywood was asserted by Moses Oppenheimer, a socialist member of the Moyer and Haywood conference. Oppenheimer reviewed the history of the Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone cases and asserted the acquittal of Haywood was the first great victory of organized labor over organized capital in the courts.

"You have every reason to be proud of this victory," Oppenheimer said, "because arrayed against you in an attempt to destroy Haywood and other honest men of the federation were two powerful states, as well as the Standard Oil Company and its allied interests. The acquittal of Haywood points out to organized labor what it can do if it will only stand united in a fight. It has prevented one innocent man from being unjustly convicted of murder. That is a great deal, considering the influence with which you had to contend. Every cent used in the defense of Haywood came from the pockets of workmen."

BIG PROBING FOR THE STANDARD OIL CO.

A dozen deputy United States marshals are hard at work today serving summonses for the special venire of jurymen which will be put in the box in the United States court Aug. 14 for the purpose of taking up presentments against railroad officials and others who have figured in the acceptance and giving of rebates growing out of the Standard Oil case. The jury is called upon the order of Judge Landis, who is going after the oil trust hot and heavy.

Aid for the district attorney has been provided and if the expectations of the government are realized the total fines of the big corporation will be about $38,449,000.

PLANS FOR THE BOISE JUBILEE

Final Arrangements Are to Be Made at Conference Tomorrow Night

Final arrangements for Moyer-Haywood day at Luna park will be made at the meeting of the defense conference tomorrow night at 55 North Clark street.

That Haywood will be in Chicago and at the park next Sunday now appears to be very likely. Clarence Darrow will be in Chicago and he has been invited to speak to the throng that is expected to gather at the well-known south side resort on next Sunday.

The entire case receipts go to the defense funds. While Moyer and Haywood are out, Pettibone, Adams and half dozen other miners are in prison in the western states and, as the mine owners believe, "headed for the gallows." The funds raised will be necessary to see that these victims of the Standard Oil mining ranch get justice.

FEARS MILLIONAIRES WILL RUIN THE UNIVERSITIES

(United Press Association Cable.) New York, Aug. 7.—Gifts of millions to universities, Chancellor Henry M. McCracken of New York university fears, is bringing the universities into disrepute. In an address yesterday he said that this view, saying: "More than one university is in great danger of being mis understood because of a few trust magnates are giving millions of dollars to them. Such universities are in danger of being reckoned the purchased servants of a narrow caste."

Reaping the Whirlwind

The capitalist press of the country has just awakened to the fact that a wave of crime is sweeping over the land.

Frantically the police are called on to put down this "reign of terror" and restore the community to safety.

No word in all this array of startling facts is found that would give the cause of these crimes.

The very papers that now demand protection have stood back of the forces that have made these crimes in all their hideousness a fact.

AT THE DOOR OF CAPITALISM AND ITS DEFENDERS LIES THE INDICTMENT FOR THESE CRIMES.

Capitalism has thrown men out of work, condemned them to the life of the outcast; it has taken the children from the school at tender years, crowded them into factories, dulled them in mind and body.

CRIME IS A SOCIAL DISEASE. IT HAS BEEN SHOWN OVER AND OVER AGAIN THAT WAVES OF CRIME HAVE IN MANY COUNTRIES FOLLOWED THE RISE IN THE PRICE OF BREAD.

The capitalist who defends present society is now confronted with the hideous thing that he has produced.

When reformers a few years ago attempted to clear out the "red light" district of Chicago it was the names of the owners of the State street stores and other big business that were found to stand behind Hinky Dink and the population of the First ward.

Occasionally capitalism finds the criminals of use to it; when it can use their votes or enlist them in the army to shoot down striking workers.

Capitalism has erred both in commission and omission. Crimes must be charged against such public bodies as the present Busse school board.

What is saved on the schools goes to build the reformatory and the jail.

The Socialists are the only body of men that has pointed out the real cause of crime and the way in which it can be stopped.

ANNIE By R. J. C.

Annie lived in one of the thriving towns of Connecticut. She was 12 years old and as a result of poverty had been to school but little, for it was inevitable that she should join the army of factory workers who create wealth for others to enjoy—work which a well known Chicago Tribune correspondent lately said "requires no special education, but constant alertness with little rest."

She had not as yet entered upon this more ambitious field of usefulness, but was "frying for her keep" by taking care of a sweet and helpless little baby. She was naturally an affectionate child and her baby charge nestled at once into a warm and tender place.

But variety is more than the spice of life to a child—it is life itself—and the desire for freedom and play soon began to tug at her heart.

She played with baby in the house, on the porch, in the yard—everywhere, but more and more restless grew the little spirit. She took him as far away as she dared to go—she passed home after home, where the children were free to enjoy themselves.

Why could not she be free to play as other children? She was not a bad or naughty girl, she deserved no punishment, and yet she was punished more cruelly, it seemed to her, than anyone living.

When reformers a few years ago attempted to clear out the "red light" district of Chicago it was the names of the owners of the State street stores and other big business that were found to stand behind Hinky Dink and the population of the First ward.

over the approaching happy occasion. They were to meet this morning at certain churches and march to the train—whole car loads of them—and ride out into the country where there were lakes and boats and trees with swains, and there was to be plenty of lemonade and ice cream and cake, and other good things, and as the vision of it all danced through Annie's head it is little wonder the demon seized her, and her little charge became a Medusa in her eyes, the sight of which not only turned her heart to stone but her whole being into a fury of rebellious hate.

She left the baby, outside and hurried in. Had any one seen her they might have suspected from her looks that all was not right with Annie, but no one noticed her. She knew where matches were conveniently kept. Her hand trembled, but she seized a number, and tried to assume an air of unconcern as she went out.

Rapidly as if the demon were hurrying her to destruction, she wheeled the baby away from the house and out of direct range of the windows where any of the family might most readily see her. Without a moment's hesitation she lighted a match. The soft cotton quickly ignited, and in a moment screams of pain coming out of the midst of the flames brought Annie to herself; but it was too late to save the little one or save herself from the deed that will haunt her while she lives.

The baby's agony was soon over, and Annie "got her name in the papers," and millions read with a shudder of her desperate attempt to set herself free. Like a little anarchist, she struck a savage unreasoning blow, which caused others to suffer, but brought no help to herself. It is true the meager telegraphic account did not give these details. It only said that Annie burned her little charge because she was deprived of play. Accept what you will of either account, but do not forget that there are multitudes of little Annies whose lives are darkened, whose minds are dwarfed and stunted because they have no chance for the proper training and recreations of childhood. No holy or noble aspirations are aroused or stimulated within them, and when they get a little older good people scold them—from a distance—because they go to the bad so easily, or are lacking in the nobler qualities of character and womanhood.

There is a life size picture in the art institute, familiar to all who frequent the place, of a little girl about Annie's age. She is dressed in white; her smiling face is life-like in its sweet hues, and the whole figure seems alive with motion which is full of grace because so free and natural, as she carries—more toys with a streamer of ribbon—more ribbon than Annie ever possessed. The beholder is charmed by the winsomeness of the little lady, who, it is evident, has never been a slave to poverty and has never thought of the possibility of working in a factory or shop.

The name under the picture is simply "Alice." Could an artist paint a picture of Annie, and had he the power to show in her features the dark and terrible passions that broke forth at last in her dreadful act, it would make a fitting companion picture to "Alice," as showing how the injustice of our wicked system curses some in order to bless others.

TO THE EDITOR

An Open Letter to Collier. Dear Collier: I am a Socialist and a regular subscriber of your valuable weekly. I heard a rumor that William Haywood had been acquitted, but I see by the current issue that he is still on the witness stand, or at least you publish an old cut representing a scene in the Bolze courtroom.

What has become of your man Connolly? Has he plunked? I noticed by his last week's report that "Godling" is a desirable citizen, for the benefit of capitalist reporters was getting the best of Connolly.

Socialist writers were excluded, I understand. And perhaps you had better arrange with some of them to furnish a report of Darrow's closing address and telegraph you the result of the verdict. Yours very anxiously,

C. C. BRIGGS. Des Moines, Iowa.

Trial an Eye-Opener. "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow," Teddy has two black eyes and Haywood is a desirable citizen. We know it all along, and a lying subsidized press could not change innocence to guilt. A great victory for the cause of labor and for Socialism particularly.

I cannot do without my Daily Socialist. The mine owners will not dare to prosecute Moyer and Pettibone further; it would still further expose and jeopardize their necks.

This trial has been an eye-opener and added tens of thousands to our voting ranks. H. S. SWANK, Swanton, O.

caused others to suffer, but brought no help to herself. It is true the meager telegraphic account did not give these details. It only said that Annie burned her little charge because she was deprived of play. Accept what you will of either account, but do not forget that there are multitudes of little Annies whose lives are darkened, whose minds are dwarfed and stunted because they have no chance for the proper training and recreations of childhood. No holy or noble aspirations are aroused or stimulated within them, and when they get a little older good people scold them—from a distance—because they go to the bad so easily, or are lacking in the nobler qualities of character and womanhood.

There is a life size picture in the art institute, familiar to all who frequent the place, of a little girl about Annie's age. She is dressed in white; her smiling face is life-like in its sweet hues, and the whole figure seems alive with motion which is full of grace because so free and natural, as she carries—more toys with a streamer of ribbon—more ribbon than Annie ever possessed. The beholder is charmed by the winsomeness of the little lady, who, it is evident, has never been a slave to poverty and has never thought of the possibility of working in a factory or shop.

The name under the picture is simply "Alice." Could an artist paint a picture of Annie, and had he the power to show in her features the dark and terrible passions that broke forth at last in her dreadful act, it would make a fitting companion picture to "Alice," as showing how the injustice of our wicked system curses some in order to bless others.

Progress in Science and Industry

By G. Edward Lind. Track-Laying Machine. A machine for track laying, accomplishes as much with a few men as several hundred working in the old way. The ties are brought forward and dropped on the roadbed, and quickly spaced to proper distances by hand. The rails follow at the same time, a little behind the further ties. One gang places the rails in position while the men nearest the machine are spiking. In this way there is a steady advance, the machine traveling over the new track it has just laid while the surface gangs follow, leaving the track ready for use.

Automobile Fender. A new safety fender for automobiles, which resembles the pilot of a locomotive, has been brought out recently. A lever within easy reach of the hand or foot of the chauffeur releases a dog which causes the fender to open instantly by means of springs. This is calculated to catch a person and prevent him from getting under the wheels. One or two state legislatures have considered bills for making fender guards on automobiles compulsory, but as yet no such law has been enacted.

Turn From Them. You may abuse him, gentlemen, I do not care a continental whether he was at the Bunker Hill mill or not. If there is a man on this jury who is in dire necessity and great distress, a man who needs a friend and adviser, a man of a loyal heart and a square friend, and above all, a conscience, if he would not turn from that monster, Harry Orchard, and grasp the honest hand of Bill Davis, I will give you my respects on every one of you twelve men.

But let us cut out the Western Federation men for a moment. I am just going to give you a little object lesson in a little advance sketch of Harry Orchard's life. He was a poor old man, with the wings supported on one side by Hawley and upon the other by Father McParland—not he.

I don't know that Harry—nobody else does excepting Hawley—even the Senator has not got acquainted with him, and I don't think he will stand for it. Even the Senator, if he honestly thought that Harry was going to heaven, would do his level best to go to the other way, and would probably succeed.

An Easy One. Let me give you just another little easy one—easy almost as these three women; we will discuss something harder pretty soon. I want to see whether I can get the right focus on this fellow before he gets into the station again. I don't want you to think I am going to be talking next week, because I am not. That is all there is from beginning to end of this case, and two lawyers seriously propose to take away the life of a human being upon the testimony of Harry Orchard.

Gentlemen, I don't believe it was ever done in any civilized land on the face of the earth, and for the very simple reason that it would be the rub in the case where such a thing would be done, and it won't be done here in Idaho.

Now, did Harry Orchard lie, or someone else? Here is the most vital point in this case as to whether a man has any motive in butchering Steunberger.

Did he lie in reference to the nine? Why, Mr. Hawley says he did not, for here is the deed—here is the deed. He said it, and of course, he could not expect to have had anything afterward. I don't know whether you fellows were ever prospectors or not; I have been all my life—after one thing or another—necessarily gold. I never prospect where I get anything but a few dollars worth of it, and I never gave one up until I had it. That is the nature of us.

If it was not—if it was not for that we would go out and die and die right away. We always think it will rain more next year than this year, and the grasshoppers and the bugs won't be so thick—I just give you this to show you my familiarity with farming. We are all prospectors one way or another.

Was Prospecting. Now, Harry Orchard was prospecting; he had been digging in the Hercules mine, not very much, for Harry don't dig—he knows an easier way of getting it, because I never saw him dig—he didn't dig—he plays poker.

Of course I don't mean to criticize him for that, for we all gamble one way or another, but he does not sweat much, and he did not learn to lead an easy life after he met Pettibone—it was before that, Harry would have made a good lawyer, for he can get along without working about as easy as anybody I know of. He got interested in this prospect, but he was gambling, and while he was gambling he was getting some debts.

He always did have, but it did not bother him—a lot of people get bothered about a lot of little things, that; it did not bother Harry; it did not bother Harry before he got religion—I don't know how he is now; I am going to talk about his religion after a while. Well, he got into the mine all right, and he got to asking Dan Cardoner and some other people, and he put this up, as he admits, as security to another man, and then he got to owing Cardoner, and Cardoner did not think much of this prospect hole, nobody does excepting the man who has it—a man always thinks his property is worth more than anybody else thinks it is worth; and so he made a deal to Cardoner, and he thought there was some value in it, but he made it for a little nothing—to pay his debts.

Expected to Do Better. Now, what we claim is that Harry always thought, after he made this strike somewhere, presumably at the end of the world, he would go always to the other side, and he would always expect to do better.

THE ROCKY MOUNTAIN WAR

Being the Closing Speech of Clarence Darrow Before the Jury Which Acquitted Haywood

I would almost say, if he tells you so, you better believe him, but I have not known him long enough to get a hunch, because like that. He may think he has to go to brace up Hawley. Goo knows he needs bracing up, and he may take that position.

Now, gentlemen, I could give you a few more instances which are easy, just plain easy ones. When you get to talking about Bill Davis and Bill Easterly it is harder, but when you get talking about Max Malich it is harder still.

Now, I am going to assume, gentlemen of the jury, that we have got twelve plain, honest men here, and I am going to try and treat you that way; if I don't I think I would lose by the game and maybe that is the reason I am not here telling you how honest I am.

When I ask you to believe Bill Davis and Bill Easterly I have got to play upon a little different line. They are members of this organization. I know that, and still in assuming their truthful men as I have lived upon the face of the earth, but I don't know what they ought to do for their fellow men—I don't know, and when you heard their testimony you have got a right to know how they got their devotion to their organization and their devotion to their leaders, and I don't ask you not to—you can weigh it with the rest.

Regard For Them. I don't know when I have ever seen a man for whom I had more regard and more respect than for Easterly and Davis. And still in assuming their truthful men as I have lived upon the face of the earth, but I don't know what they ought to do for their fellow men—I don't know, and when you heard their testimony you have got a right to know how they got their devotion to their organization and their devotion to their leaders, and I don't ask you not to—you can weigh it with the rest.
