RAILROADS ARE PATTED ON WRIST BY COMMISSION Ordered to Be Fair After Next March

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—The interstate commerce commission today reaffirmed its long-standing policy of opposing the practice of the railroads in assigning private cars and foreign tonnage to their own lines.

The commission was ordered to change their practice with regard to privately owned coal cars by March 1, 1923.

The private car owners are grouped generally into three distinct categories: the coal carriers, the pig iron carriers, and the pig iron carriers.

Those that own the plants and ships, but not the mines, are included in this class as are the Bethlehem Steel corporation, the United States Steel corporation, and the Carnegie Steel corporation.

Those that own the cars and plants, but not the mines, are included in this class as are the Republic Iron Works, the Republic Steel, and the Republic Iron Works.

Those that own cars and mines, but which depend upon outside contracts for the disposition of the coal, the Berryland-White Coal Co., and the Westmoreland Coal Co.

GRAND LOT OF LABOR GERMAN Men, Women and Children Must Labor

By GARY BRANNIN. (Special to the Daily Worker.) HOCHST, Germany, Jan. 13.—This little village of 2,200 souls midway between Frankfurt and Wiesbaden affords a picture of rural life which is illuminating to one who comes with impressions of Germany gained chiefly from reading.

Nestled between the wooded slopes of the hills with a noisy little stream running through the town this place of red roofs, half timbered houses dating back to the 17th century and narrow winding streets, has a charm to the newcomer familiar with the regimented order of the cities.

The Communist Press and the Young Workers

By JOHN WILLIAMSON. THE Young Workers League participated in the campaign to launch our first English Communist Daily and today it feels proud of the fact that during the past year we have been able to keep our Communist Daily in the field.

During the past year when the League has been advancing forward on the field of economic struggle, the DAILY WORKER has been an invaluable asset in each of the many campaigns conducted by the League.

Roosevelt's Revelations

"As for Mr. Roosevelt's war on corporations," Mr. Dewey continued, "that was more fiction than fact." The quotation is taken from an article by George E. Briggs in the Chicago Daily News, accompanying the first installment of the late Theodore Roosevelt's letters to Henry Cabot Lodge.

His life-long political friends and advisor. The letters, a revealing slant of sectional and class as severe an indictment of the capitalist system as one could desire to see published.

Roosevelt, the alleged foe of the big corporations, is characterized as their best friend by Chauncey Dewey, chairman of the board of directors of the New York Central railroad, Dewey knew what he was talking about.

But the big corporations did not like Teddy at first. They had to be shown. They refused to support his campaign for the presidency.

That was plain language and Teddy informs us that the Standard Oil crowd and the Morgan interests gave expression to similar thoughts, but in more discreet language.

To offset the bad impression his demagogic had created in the minds of the money barons, Roosevelt delivered a speech purposely prepared to set himself up as the champion of the workers.

Roosevelt himself was one of the most accomplished political mount-leaders in American history. He also gives an inside view of capitalist politics.

The Daily Worker and the Pravda

By M. A. SKROMNY THE revolutionary workers of the United States are celebrating today the first birthday of their new paper, THE DAILY WORKER.

Since the daily was established we participated actively in a few more or less big strikes.

analyzing again the growth of the masses who are writing about THEIR life and THEIR struggles. And we must write in THEIR language, leaving out all high sounding phrases which the average worker does not understand.

It is the labor correspondent that is needed most by the workers. It is the labor correspondent that can remedy this situation best.

farmers. Some space has to be devoted to party matters, not the paper as a whole must be devoted to the wide masses.

Only when we overcome these shortcomings, when we will succeed in mobilizing the labor correspondents all over the country and with their aid enlarge our circulation among the workers and poor farmers, will we have a real paper for the workers.

workers with his shopmates every day. He knows what they need, and how to talk to them about their needs.

Put Capable Comrades on the Job. It is up to our party units to have capable and willing comrades assigned to write from the shop or factory.

These are the reasons why the party units must also see to it that the copies in which the letters of these correspondents are printed should receive special circulation among the workers in the shops and factories.

There is a story of the lives and struggles of the Rocky Mountain miners by Joe Hill. No one of shop Nader by Martin Abern, who has acquired considerable experience in the revolutionary struggle.

The little story "Consequences" by Jack Wilson, I read with delight. It is a story which tells us really and honestly about the sphere of working class life picturing the hideous glare of the economic power.

Turning again to the cover of the January issue of the Workers Monthly one finds added inspiration in the picture of the sturdy working woman with the crimson banner. One can almost feel the throbbing of millions of marching workers, intent upon a definite road to the glorious conquest.

They Cannot Ignore Russia

Whenever the name of Russia was mentioned within the hearing of the late Secretary of State Hughes (late as secretary of state), it is reported by Washington correspondents, that he whiskered gentleman got very angry.

While Calvin Coolidge, the chosen leader (for the moment) of American capitalism, decides the time is ripe for this country to drop the policy of ignoring the existence of a powerful nation covering one-sixth of the earth's surface, it will not be because of any love for the Soviet regime.

It will mean that the capitalists of the United States go longer instead to be isolated from the opportunity to make profit out of the development of Russia's natural wealth and of trade with the people of that country.

There is another factor. The United States looks with anxious eyes on the diplomatic strategy of Soviet Russia in the Orient.

In a lecture delivered recently by Morris Hillquit, millionaire lawyer of what is left of the socialist party of America, before a New York audience, he declared that America has ceased to be a classless nation, such as it was a generation or so ago.

This is rather enlightening. In our Communist ignorance we suspected that classes existed in America for many, many generations and it only Hillquit read a little history of the American working class movement by one of his co-workers in the field of world socialism, he would find much evidence in the form of bloody battles between the workers and the capitalists to show that there were classes in this country.

Hillquit is interested in proving that we are developing the sinister phenomenon of a class society in America in order to lay the basis for his fake labor party, the foundation for which he declared was laid in the last election.

There are classes in America today. There were the classes in America yesterday. The history of the human race is a history of class struggles.

By ARNE SWABECK POWER and belief expressed in every line a piercing analysis of the tactics and methods of the labor movement.

The first article, "Lenin, Leader and Comrade," by Bittelmann, is precisely what the title implies: a simple but powerful description of the revolutionary qualities of the great working class leader and Leninism. It is the best installment of the history of the Russian Communist Party, and the only true proletarian party—and the realms of modern revolution which is described by Bittelmann. Lenin the comrade, who gave his best to the communist Party, who belongs body and soul to the proletarian class, in which now leads the struggle.

Comrade Foster's article on the EI also contains a very interesting one of the immediate party realities. In his usual positive style he rips into the teachers in the desperate struggle to conquer and deliver to Wall Street a labor movement, seized and served with the hands of the bourgeoisie.

The article "Consequences" by Jack Wilson, I read with delight. It is a story which tells us really and honestly about the sphere of working class life picturing the hideous glare of the economic power.
