Banquet Marking Premier Chou's Tour

Premier Chou En-lai's recent tour abroad has written a memorable page in the history of China's friendly relations with foreign countries. Accompanied by Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister Chen Yi, the Premier travelled from the Pacific to the Atlantic and from Asia to Africa and Europe. They visited 14 countries in 72 days. Wherever they went they received a rousing welcome. As the Premier put it in his speech at the banquet Vice-Premier Chen Yi and his wife gave last week for the diplomatic envoys of the countries they had visited: "Those heart-warming scenes which we can hardly describe in words will always live in our hearts."

The Premier recalled the pleasant days he had spent abroad and he took the opportunity to express once again his thanks to the leaders, governments and peoples of those lands. This tour, he said, was most inspiring; it had helped him to a deeper understanding of the friendship between the people of China and those countries. Said the Premier: "The people of China and Albania and all Asian-African countries have the common experience of suffering from imperialist aggression and oppression and have the common task of opposing imperialism and old and new colonialism. Our friendship has been tempered and developed in the storm of struggle; it is everlasting and unbreakable. The Chinese people regard the deep friendship the people of other countries have for them as a great encouragement and an invaluable support."

Premier Chou said that his recent tour had enabled him to realize more clearly than ever before that the present international situation was favourable to the people of all countries and unfavourable to imperialism and old and new colonialism. "The forces of socialism," he stressed, "are growing stronger. The Asian and African peoples' anti-imperialist struggles and the great unity of the people of the world are all growing in strength. The rising tide of the people's revolution throughout the world is pounding and sweeping away the forces of reaction and decay. We have seen with our own eyes that Asia and Africa, for centuries subjected to colonialist aggression, enslavement, exploitation and plunder, have become awakened, militant and advanced continents."

The Premier paid tribute to the Asian and African peoples' struggle against imperialism and old and new colonialism and for winning and safeguarding national independence. "This struggle," he said, "coupled both with the anti-imperialist struggle of the Latin American peoples and with the struggle of the people of the world in defence of world peace and for human progress, is changing the face of the earth with the might of a thunderstorm." He expressed confidence that, so long as the people of the whole world strengthened their unity, persisted in the struggle and ceaselessly frustrated the aggressive acts and war plans of the imperialists, world peace could be preserved and the cause of human progress promoted. He declared: "The future of mankind is infinitely bright."

Burmese Ambassador Kyaw-Winn spoke on behalf of all the guests. He expressed his hearty congratulations to the Chinese leaders on their achievements during their tour which, he said, had contributed to the further strengthening of Asian-African solidarity. The success of this tour, he continued, "is entirely due to the personality, sincerity, broadmindedness and the all-pervading friendliness and goodwill on the part of Premier Chou En-lai and the other distinguished visitors accompanying him, as well as to the strict observance of the Five Principles of Peaceful Coexistence and the strong desire to strengthen Asian-African solidarity and uphold the Bandung spirit." The Ambassador noted that the visits and the talks held between the Chinese leaders and those of the countries visited had enhanced mutual understanding and brought about closer ties and co-operation between China and these countries. "This," he declared, "will no doubt be an important factor in the maintenance of world peace."

The banquet proceeded in a friendly atmosphere. Both hosts and guests toasted the solidarity between Asian-African countries and the great unity of the people of the world.

Before the banquet, the diplomatic envoys saw an exhibition of photographs of Premier Chou's visit to their countries. The banquet was followed by a performance of songs and dances by the capital's leading stage artists.

Chinese and Japanese C.P. Delegations Hold Talks

The delegation of the Japanese Communist Party led by Satomi Hakamada, Member of the Presidium and of the Secretariat of the Party's Central Committee, left Peking on March 27 by special plane for a friendly visit to the Korean Democratic People's Republic. After its visit to Korea the delegation will return and continue its tour of China.

During its stay in Peking, the delegation held talks on questions of common concern from March 21 to 25 with a delegation of the Chinese Communist Party headed by Liu Shao-chi, Vice-Chairman of the Party's Central Committee. Chou En-lai and Teng Hsiao-ping, Vice-Chairman and General Secretary respectively of the Central Committee, and other Party leaders also took part in the talks.

Chairman Liu Receives Albanian Delegation

The delegation from the State University of Tirana, led by its President Kahreman Ylli, was received by Chairman Liu Shao-chi on March 26. The day before, Premier Chou En-lai had a cordial and friendly talk with the members of the delegation.

The Albanian delegation arrived in Peking on February 21 and later toured the southern parts of China. After its return to the capital Kahreman Ylli, acting for the State University of Tirana, signed a scientific co-operation agreement with the Chinese Academy of Sciences on March 25. A 1964-65 executive plan implementing the agreement was signed at the same time. That evening, Kuo Mo-jo, President of the Chinese Academy of Sciences, gave a banquet in honour of the Albanian guests.

Sino-Hungarian Trade

China and Hungary have concluded a goods exchange and payments agreement for 1964. Completing talks in Peking on March 28, Li Chiang, Vice-Minister of Foreign Trade, and Szalai Bela, Vice-Minister of Foreign Trade and head of the Hungarian government trade delegation, signed the agreement for their countries.

China will supply Hungary with minerals, machinery, chemicals, foodstuffs, and light industrial goods. Hungary will supply China with steel tubes, diesel locomotives, tele-

THE present article will discuss the familiar question of "peaceful transition." It has become familiar and has attracted everybody's attention because Khrushchov raised it at the 20th Congress of the C.P.S.U. and rounded it into a complete system in the form of a programme at the 22nd Congress, where he pitted his revisionist views against the Marxist-Leninist views. The open letter of the Central Committee of the C.P.S.U. of July 14, 1963, once again struck up this old tune.

In the history of the international communist movement the betrayal of Marxism and of the proletariat by the revisionists has always manifested itself most sharply in their opposition to violent revolution and to the dictatorship of the proletariat and in their advocacy of peaceful transition from capitalism to socialism. This is likewise the case with Khrushchov's revisionism. On this question, Khrushchov is a disciple of Browder and Tito as well as of Bernstein and Kautsky.

Since the days of World War II, we have witnessed the emergence of Browderite revisionism, Titoite revisionism and the theory of structural reform. These varieties of revisionism are local phenomena in the international communist movement. But Khrushchov's revisionism, which has emerged and gained ascendancy in the leadership of the C.P.S.U., constitutes a major question of overall significance for the international communist movement with a vital bearing on the success or failure of the entire revolutionary cause of the international proletariat.

For this reason, in the present article we are replying to the revisionists in more explicit terms than before.

A Disciple of Bernstein and Kautsky

Beginning with the 20th Congress of the C.P.S.U., Khrushchov put forward the road of "peaceful transition," i.e., "transition to socialism by the parliamentary road,"<sup>1</sup> which is diametrically opposed to the road of the October Revolution.

Let us examine the "parliamentary road" peddled by Khrushchov and his like.

Khrushchov holds that the proletariat can win a stable majority in parliament under the bourgeois dictatorship and under bourgeois electoral laws. He says that in the capitalist countries

. . . the working class, by rallying around itself the toiling peasantry, the intelligentsia, all patriotic forces, and resolutely repulsing the opportunist elements who are incapable of giving up the policy of compromise with the capitalists and landlords, is in a position to defeat the reactionary forces opposed to the popular interest, to capture a stable majority in parliament. . . .<sup>2</sup>

Khrushchov maintains that if the proletariat can win a majority in parliament, this in itself will amount to the seizure of state power and the smashing of the bourgeois state machinery. He says that, for the working class,

. . . to win a majority in parliament and transform it into an organ of the people's power, given a powerful revolutionary movement in the country, means smashing the military-bureaucratic machine of the bourgeoisie and setting up a new, proletarian people's state in parliamentary form.<sup>3</sup>

Khrushchov holds that if the proletariat can win a stable majority in parliament, this in itself will enable it to realize the socialist transformation of society. He says that the winning of a stable parliamentary majority "could create for the working class of a number of capitalist and former colonial countries the conditions needed to secure fundamental social changes."<sup>4</sup> Also,

. . . the present situation offers the working class in a number of capitalist countries a real opportunity to unite the overwhelming majority of the people under its leadership and to secure the transfer of the basic means of production into the hands of the people.<sup>5</sup>

The Programme of the C.P.S.U. maintains that "the working class of many countries can, even before capitalism is overthrown, compel the bourgeoisie to carry out measures that transcend ordinary reforms."<sup>6</sup> The Programme even states that under the bourgeois dictatorship it is possible for a situation to emerge in certain countries, in which "it will be preferable for the bourgeoisie . . . to agree to the basic means of production being purchased from it."<sup>7</sup>

The stuff Khrushchov is touting is nothing original but is simply a reproduction of the revisionism of the Second International, a revival of Bernsteinism and Kautskyism.

The main distinguishing marks of Bernstein's betrayal of Marxism were his advocacy of the legal parliamentary road and his opposition to violent revolution, the smashing of the old state machinery and the dictatorship of the proletariat.

Bernstein held that capitalism could "grow into socialism" peacefully. He said that the political system of modern bourgeois society "should not be destroyed but should only be further developed,"<sup>8</sup> and that "we are now bringing about by voting, demonstrations and similar means of pressure reforms which would have required bloody revolution a hundred years ago."<sup>9</sup>

He held that the legal parliamentary road was the only way to bring about socialism. He said that if the working class has "universal and equal suffrage, the social principle which is the basic condition for emancipation is attained."<sup>10</sup>

He asserted that "the day will come when it [the working class] will have become numerically so strong and will be so important for the whole of society that so to speak the palace of the rulers will no longer be able to withstand its pressure and will collapse semi-spontaneously."<sup>11</sup>

Lenin said:

The Bernsteinians accepted and accept Marxism minus its directly revolutionary aspect. They do not regard the parliamentary struggle as one of the weapons particularly suitable for definite historical periods, but as the main and almost the sole form of struggle making "force," "seizure," "dictatorship," unnecessary. ("The Victory of the Cadets and the Tasks of the Workers' Party," Collected Works, Foreign Languages Publishing House, Moscow, 1962, Vol. 10, p.249.)

Herr Kautsky was a fitting successor to Bernstein. Like Bernstein, he actively publicized the parliamentary road and opposed violent revolution and the dictatorship of the proletariat. He said that under the bourgeois democratic system there is "no more room for armed struggle for the settlement of class conflicts"<sup>12</sup> and that "it would be ridiculous . . . to preach a violent political overthrow."<sup>13</sup> He attacked Lenin and the Bolshevik Party by comparing them to "an impatient

midwife who uses violence to make a pregnant woman give birth in the fifth month instead of the ninth."<sup>14</sup>

Kautsky was hopelessly afflicted with parliamentary cretinism. He made the well-known statement, "The aim of our political struggle remains, as hitherto, the conquest of state power by winning a majority in parliament and by converting parliament into the master of the government."<sup>15</sup>

He also said:

The parliamentary republic—with a monarchy at the top on the English model, or without—is to my mind the base out of which proletarian dictatorship and socialist society grow. This republic is the "state of the future" toward which we must strive.<sup>16</sup>

Lenin severely criticized these absurd statements of Kautsky's.

In denouncing Kautsky, Lenin declared:

Only scoundrels or simpletons can think that the proletariat must win the majority in elections carried out under the yoke of the bourgeoisie, under the yoke of wage-slavery, and that it should win power afterwards. This is the height of folly or hypocrisy; it is substituting voting, under the old system and with the old power, for class struggle and revolution. ("Greetings to the Italian, French and German Communists," Collected Works, 4th Russian ed., Moscow, Vol. 30, p.40.)

Lenin made the pointed comment that Kautsky's parliamentary road "is nothing but the purest and the most vulgar opportunism: repudiating revolution in deeds, while accepting it in words." ("The State and Revolution," Selected Works, F.L.P.H., Moscow, 1952, Vol. 2, Part 1, p.323.) He said:

By so "interpreting" the concept "revolutionary dictatorship of the proletariat" as to expunge the revolutionary violence of the oppressed class against its oppressors, Kautsky beat the world record in the liberal distortion of Marx. ("The Proletarian Revolution and the Renegade Kautsky," Selected Works, F.L.P.H., Moscow, 1952, Vol. 2, Part 2, pp.47-48.)

Here, we have quoted Khrushchov as well as Bernstein and Kautsky and Lenin's criticism of these two worthies at some length in order to show that Khrushchov's revisionism is modern Bernsteinism and Kautskyism, pure and simple. As with Bernstein and Kautsky, Khrushchov's betrayal of Marxism is most sharply manifested in his opposition to revolutionary violence, in what he does "to expunge revolutionary violence." In this respect, Kautsky and Bernstein have now clearly lost their title to Khrushchov who has set a new world record. Khrushchov, the worthy disciple of Bernstein and Kautsky, has excelled his masters.

Violent Revolution Is a Universal Law Of Proletarian Revolution

The entire history of the working-class movement tells us that the acknowledgment or non-acknowledgment of violent revolution as a universal law of proletarian revolution, of the necessity of smashing the old state machine, and of the necessity of replacing the dictatorship of the bourgeoisie by the dictatorship of the proletariat has always been the watershed between Marxism and all brands of opportunism and revisionism, between proletarian revolutionaries and all renegades from the proletariat.

According to the basic teachings of Marxism-Leninism, the key question in every revolution is that of state power. And the key question in the proletarian revolution is that of the seizure of state power and the smashing of the bourgeois state machine by violence, the establishment of the dictatorship of the proletariat and the replacement of the bourgeois state by the proletarian state.

Marxism has always proclaimed the inevitability of violent revolution. It points out that violent revolution is the midwife to socialist society, the only road to the replacement of the dictatorship of the bourgeoisie by the dictatorship of the proletariat, and a universal law of proletarian revolution.

Marxism teaches us that the state itself is a form of violence. The main components of the state machine are the army and the police. History shows that all ruling classes depend upon violence to maintain their rule.

The proletariat would, of course, prefer to gain power by peaceful means. But abundant historical evidence indicates that the reactionary classes never give up power voluntarily and that they are always the first to use violence to repress the revolutionary mass movement and to provoke civil war, thus placing armed struggle on the agenda.

Lenin has spoken of "civil war, without which not a single great revolution in history has yet been able to get along, and without which not a single serious Marxist has conceived of the transition from capitalism to socialism." ("Prophetic Words," Collected Works, 4th Russian ed., Moscow, Vol. 27, p.457.)

The great revolutions in history referred to by Lenin include the bourgeois revolution. The bourgeois revolution is one in which one exploiting class overthrows another, and yet it cannot be made without a civil war. Still more is this the case with the proletarian revolution, which is a revolution to abolish all exploiting classes and systems.

Regarding the fact that violent revolution is a universal law of proletarian revolution, Lenin repeatedly pointed out that "between capitalism and socialism there lies a long period of 'birth pains'—that violence is always the midwife of the old society," ("Those Who Are Terrified by the Collapse of the Old and Those Who Fight for the New," Collected Works, 4th Russian ed., Vol. 26, p.362.) that the bourgeois state "cannot be superseded by the proletarian state (the dictatorship of the proletariat) through the process of 'withering away,' but, as a general rule, only through a violent revolution," and that "the necessity of systematically imbuing the masses with this and precisely this view of violent revolution lies at the root of all the teachings of Marx and Engels." ("The State and Revolution,"

Selected Works, F.L.P.H., Moscow, 1952, Vol. 2, Part 1, pp.219-220.)

Stalin, too, said that a violent revolution of the proletariat, the dictatorship of the proletariat, is "an inevitable and indispensable condition" for the advance towards socialism in all countries ruled by capital. ("Reply to the Discussion on the Report on 'The Social-Democratic Deviation in Our Party,'" Works, F.L.P.H., Moscow, 1954, Vol. 8, p.323.)

Can a radical transformation of the bourgeois order be achieved without violent revolution, without the dictatorship of the proletariat? Stalin answered:

Obviously not. To think that such a revolution can be carried out peacefully, within the framework of bourgeois democracy, which is adapted to the rule of the bourgeoisie, means that one has either gone out of one's mind and lost normal human understanding, or has grossly and openly repudiated the proletarian revolution. ("Concerning Questions of Leninism," Works, F.L.P.H., Moscow, 1954, Vol. 8, p.25.)

Basing himself on the Marxist-Leninist theory of violent revolution and the new experience of the proletarian revolution and the people's democratic revolution led by the proletariat, Comrade Mao Tse-tung advanced the celebrated dictum that "political power grows out of the barrel of a gun."

Comrade Mao Tse-tung said:

... revolutions and revolutionary wars are inevitable in class society and ... in their absence no leap in social development can be accomplished, the reactionary ruling classes cannot be overthrown and the people cannot win political power. ("On Contradiction," Selected Works, 2nd Chinese ed., Peking, Vol. 1, p.322.)

He stated:

The seizure of power by armed force, the settlement of the issue by war, is the central task and the highest form of revolution. This Marxist-Leninist principle of revolution holds good universally, for China and for all other countries. ("Problems of War and Strategy," Selected Military Writings, Foreign Languages Press, Peking, 1963, p.267.)

He stated further:

Experience in the class struggle in the era of imperialism teaches us that it is only by the power of the gun that the working class and the labouring masses can defeat the armed bourgeoisie and landlords; in this sense we may say that only with guns can the whole world be transformed. (ibid., p.273.)

To sum up, violent revolution is a universal law of proletarian revolution. This is a fundamental tenet of Marxism-Leninism. It is on this most important question that Khrushchov betrays Marxism-Leninism.

Our Struggle Against Khrushchov's Revisionism

When Khrushchov first put forward the "parliamentary road" at the 20th Congress of the C.P.S.U., the Chinese Communist Party considered it a gross error, a violation of the fundamental theories of Marxism-Leninism, and absolutely unacceptable.

As Khrushchov's revisionism was still in its incipient stage and the leaders of the C.P.S.U. had not as yet provoked open polemics, we refrained for a time from publicly exposing or criticizing Khrushchov's error of the "parliamentary road." But, as against his erroneous proposition, we stated the Marxist-Leninist view in a positive form in our documents and articles. At the same time we waged the appropriate and necessary struggle against it at inter-Party talks and meetings among the fraternal Parties.

Summing up the experience of the Chinese revolution, we clearly stated in the political report of our Central Committee to the Eighth National Congress of our Party in September 1956:

While our Party was working for peaceful change, it did not allow itself to be put off its guard or to give up the people's arms. . . .

Unlike the reactionaries, the people are not warlike. . . . But when the people were compelled to take up arms, they were completely justified in doing so. To have opposed the people's taking up arms and to have asked them to submit to the attacking enemy would have been to follow an opportunist line. Here, the question of following a revolutionary line or an opportunist line became the major issue of whether our six hundred million people should or should not capture political power when conditions were ripe. Our Party followed the revolutionary line and today we have the People's Republic of China.

On this question, the Marxist-Leninist view of the Eighth National Congress of the C.P.C. is opposed to the revisionist view of the 20th Congress of the C.P.S.U.

In December 1956 we explained the road of the October Revolution in a positive way in the article "More on the Historical Experience of the Dictatorship of the Proletariat," thus in fact criticizing the so-called parliamentary road which Khrushchov set against the road of the October Revolution.

In many private talks with the leaders of the C.P.S.U., the leading comrades of the Central Committee of the C.P.C. made serious criticisms of Khrushchov's erroneous views. We hoped in all sincerity that he would correct his mistakes.

At the time of the meeting of representatives of the Communist and Workers' Parties in 1957, the delegation of the C.P.C. engaged in a sharp debate with the delegation of the C.P.S.U. on the question of the transition from capitalism to socialism.

In the first draft for the Declaration which it proposed during the preparations for the Moscow meeting, the Central Committee of the C.P.S.U. referred only to the possibility of peaceful transition and said nothing about the possibility of non-peaceful transition; it referred only to the parliamentary road and said nothing about other means of struggle, and at the same time pinned hopes for the winning of state power through the parliamentary road on "the concerted actions of Communists and socialists." Naturally the Central Committee of the C.P.C. could not agree to these wrong views, which depart from Marxism-Leninism, being written into the programmatic document of all the Communist and Workers' Parties.

After the delegation of the C.P.C. made its criticisms, the Central Committee of the C.P.S.U. produced a second draft for the Declaration. Although phrases about the possibility of non-peaceful transition were added, the formulation of the question of peaceful transition in this draft still reflected the revisionist views put forward by Khrushchov at the 20th Congress of the C.P.S.U.

The delegation of the C.P.C. expressed its disagreement with these erroneous views in clear terms. On November 10, 1957, it systematically explained its own views on the question of the transition from capitalism to socialism to the Central Committee of the C.P.S.U., to which it also presented a written outline.

The main points made in our written outline are summarized below.

It is advantageous from the point of view of tactics to refer to the desire for peaceful transition, but it would be inappropriate to over-emphasize the possibility of peaceful transition. It is necessary to be prepared at all times to repulse counter-revolutionary attacks and, at the critical juncture of the revolution when the working class is seizing state power, to overthrow the bourgeoisie by armed force if it uses armed force to suppress the people's revolution (generally speaking, it is inevitable that the bourgeoisie will do so).

The parliamentary form of struggle must be fully utilized, but its role is limited. What is most important is to proceed with the hard work of accumulating revolutionary strength; peaceful transition should not be interpreted in such a way as solely to mean transition through a parliamentary majority. The main question is that of the state machinery, namely, the smashing of the old state machinery (chiefly the armed forces) and the establishment of the new state machinery (chiefly the armed forces).

The social democratic parties are not parties of socialism; with the exception of certain Left wings, they are a variant of bourgeois political parties. On the question of socialist revolution, our position is fundamentally different from that of the social democratic parties. This distinction must not be obscured.

These views of ours are in full accord with Marxism-Leninism.

The comrades of the delegation of the Central Committee of the C.P.S.U. were unable to argue against them, but they repeatedly asked us to make allowances for their internal needs, expressing the hope that the formulation of this question in the draft Declaration might show some connection with its formulation by the 20th Congress of the C.P.S.U.

We had refuted the wrong views of the leadership of the C.P.S.U. and put forward a written outline of our own views. For this reason and for the sake of the common struggle against the enemy, the delegation of the C.P.C. decided to meet the repeated wishes of the comrades of the C.P.S.U. and agreed to take the draft of the Central Committee of the C.P.S.U. on this question as the basis, while suggesting amendments in only a few places.

We hoped that through this debate the comrades of the C.P.S.U. would awaken to their errors and correct them. But contrary to our hopes, the leaders of the C.P.S.U. did not do so.

At the meeting of fraternal Parties in 1960, the delegation of the C.P.C. again engaged in repeated sharp debates with the delegation of the C.P.S.U. on the question of the transition from capitalism to socialism, and thoroughly exposed and criticized Khrushchov's revisionist views. During the meeting, the Chinese and the Soviet sides each adhered to its own position, and no agreement could be reached. In view of the general wish of fraternal Parties that a common document should be hammered out at the meeting, the delegation of the C.P.C. finally made a concession on this question again and agreed to the verbatim transcription of the relevant passages in the 1957 Declaration into the 1960 Statement, again out of consideration for the needs of the leaders of the C.P.S.U. At the same time, during this meeting we distributed the Outline of Views on the Question of Peaceful Transition put forward by the Chinese Communist Party on November 10, 1957, and made it clear that we were giving consideration to the leadership of the C.P.S.U. on this issue for the last time, and would not do so again.

If comrades now make the criticism that we were wrong in giving this consideration to the leaders of the C.P.S.U., we are quite ready to accept this criticism.

As the formulation of the question of peaceful transition in the Declaration and the Statement was based on the drafts of the C.P.S.U. and in some places retained the formulation by its 20th Congress, there are serious weaknesses and errors in the overall presentation, even though a certain amount of patching up was done. While indicating that the ruling classes never relinquish power voluntarily, the formulation in the two documents also asserts that state power can be won in a number of capitalist countries without civil war; while stating that extra-parliamentary mass struggle should be waged to smash the resistance of the reactionary forces, it also asserts that a stable majority can be secured in parliament and that parliament can thus be transformed into an instrument serving the working people; and while referring to non-peaceful transition, it fails to stress violent revolution as a universal law. The leadership of the C.P.S.U. has taken advantage of these weaknesses and errors in the Declaration and the Statement and used them as an excuse for peddling Khrushchov's revisionism.

It must be solemnly declared that the Chinese Communist Party has all along maintained its differing views on the formulation of the question of the transition from capitalism to socialism in the Declaration of 1957 and the Statement of 1960. We have never concealed our views. We hold that in the interest of the revolutionary cause of the international proletariat and in order to prevent the revisionists from misusing these programmatic documents of the fraternal Parties, it is necessary to amend the formulation of the question in the Declaration and the Statement through joint consultation of Communist and Workers' Parties so as to conform to the revolutionary principles of Marxism-Leninism.

In order to help readers acquaint themselves with the full views of the Chinese Communist Party on this question, we are republishing the complete text of the Outline of Views on the Question of Peaceful Transition put forward by the delegation of the C.P.C. to the Central Committee of the C.P.S.U. on November 10, 1957, as an appendix to this article.

In the last eight years the struggle of the Marxist-Leninist parties and of the world's Marxist-Leninists against Khrushchov's revisionism has made great progress. More and more people have come to recognize the true features of Khrushchov's revisionism. Nevertheless, the leaders of the C.P.S.U. are still resorting to subterfuge and quibbles, and trying in every possible way to peddle their nonsense.

Therefore, it is still necessary for us to refute the fallacy of "peaceful transition."

Sophistry Cannot Alter History

The leaders of the C.P.S.U. openly distort the works of Marx and Lenin and distort history too to cover up their betrayal of Marxism-Leninism and justify their revisionist line.

They argue: Did not Marx "admit such a possibility [peaceful transition] for England and America"?<sup>17</sup> In fact, this argument is taken from the renegade Kautsky who used the self-same method to distort Marx's views and oppose the proletarian revolution and the dictatorship of the proletariat.

It is true that in the 1870s Marx said that in countries like the United States and Britain "the workers can reach their goal by peaceful means." But at the same time he stressed that this possibility was an exception. He said that "even if this be so, we must also recognize that in the majority of countries on the continent force must serve as the lever of our revolution." ("On the Hague Congress," Speech at a Mass Meeting in Amsterdam, Collected Works of Marx and Engels, 2nd Russian ed., Moscow, Vol. 18, p.154.) What is more, he pointed out,

The English bourgeoisie has always shown its readiness to accept the decision of the majority, so long as it has the monopoly of the suffrage. But believe me, at the moment when it finds itself in the minority on questions which it considers vitally important, we will have a new slave-holders' war here. ("Record of a Talk Between K. Marx and the Correspondent of The World," Collected Works of Marx and Engels, 2nd Russian ed., Moscow, Vol. 17, p.637.)

Lenin said in his criticism of the renegade Kautsky:

The argument that Marx in the 'seventies granted the possibility of a peaceful transition to socialism in England and America is the argument of a sophist, or, to put it bluntly, of a swindler who juggles with quotations and references. First, Marx regarded this possibility as an exception even then. Secondly, in those days monopoly capitalism, i.e., imperialism, did not yet exist. Thirdly, in England and America there was no military then—as there is now—serving as the chief apparatus of the bourgeois state machine. (“The Proletarian Revolution and the Renegade Kautsky,” Collected Works, International Publishers, New York, 1945. Vol. 23, pp.233-34.)

Lenin said that, by virtue of its fundamental economic traits, imperialism is distinguished “by a minimum attachment for peace and freedom, and by a maximum and universal development of militarism.” “To ‘fail to notice’ this” in the discussion of the question of peaceful or violent change is “to stoop to the position of a common or garden variety lackey of the bourgeoisie.” (ibid., p.357.)

Today, the leaders of the C.P.S.U. have struck up Kautsky’s old tune. What is this if not stooping to the position of a common or garden lackey of the bourgeoisie?

Again, the leaders of the C.P.S.U. argue: Did not Lenin “admit in principle the possibility of a peaceful revolution”?<sup>18</sup> This is even worse sophistry.

For a time after the February Revolution of 1917 Lenin envisaged a situation in which “in Russia, by way of an exception, this revolution can be a peaceful revolution.” (“First All-Russian Congress of Soviets of Workers’ and Soldiers’ Deputies,” Selected Works, F.L.P.H., Moscow, 1952, Vol. 2, Part 1, p.80.) He called this “an exception” because of the special circumstances then obtaining: “The essence of the matter was that the arms were in the hands of the people, and that no coercion from without was exercised in regard to the people.” (“On Slogans,” Selected Works, F.L.P.H., Moscow, 1952, Vol. 2, Part 1, p.88.) In July 1917 the counter-revolutionary bourgeois government suppressed the masses by force of arms, drenching the streets of Petrograd with the blood of workers and soldiers. After this incident Lenin declared that “all hopes for a peaceful development of the Russian Revolution have definitely vanished.” (“The Political Situation,” Collected Works, International Publishers, New York, 1932, Vol. 21, Book 1, p.37.) In October 1917 Lenin and the Bolshevik Party resolutely led the workers and soldiers in an armed uprising and seized state power. Lenin pointed out in January 1918 that “the class struggle . . . has turned into a civil war.” (“People From the Next World,” Collected Works, 4th Russian ed., Moscow, Vol. 26, p.393.) The Soviet state had to wage another three and a half years of revolutionary war and to make heavy sacrifices before it smashed both the domestic counter-revolutionary rebellion and the foreign armed intervention. Only then was the victory of the revolution consolidated. In 1919 Lenin said that “revolutionary violence gained brilliant successes in the October Revolution.” (“The Successes and Difficulties of Soviet Power,” Collected Works, 4th Russian ed., Moscow, Vol. 29, p.41.)

Now the leaders of the C.P.S.U. have the impudence to say that the October Revolution was “the most bloodless of all revolutions”<sup>19</sup> and was “accomplished almost peacefully.”<sup>20</sup> Their assertions are totally contrary to the historical facts. How can they face the revolutionary martyrs who shed their blood and sacrificed their lives to create the world’s first socialist state?

When we point out that world history has thus far produced no precedent for peaceful transition from capitalism to socialism, the leaders of the C.P.S.U. quibble, saying that “practical experience exists of the achievement of the socialist revolution in peaceful form.” And shutting their eyes to all the facts, they state, “In Hungary in 1919, the dictatorship of the proletariat was established by peaceful means.”<sup>21</sup>

Is this true? No, it is not. Let us see what Bela Kun, the leader of the Hungarian revolution, had to say.

The Communist Party of Hungary was founded in November 1918. The newborn Party immediately plunged into revolutionary struggle and proclaimed as the slogans of socialist revolution: “Disarm the bourgeoisie, arm the proletariat, establish Soviet power.” (Bela Kun, Lessons of the Proletarian Revolution in Hungary, Russian ed., Moscow, 1960, p.46.) The Hungarian Communist Party worked actively in all fields for an armed uprising. It armed the workers, strove to win over the government troops and organized the demobilized soldiers, staged armed demonstrations, led the workers in expelling their bosses and occupying the factories, led the agricultural workers in seizing large estates, disarmed the reactionary army officers, troops and police, combined strikes with armed uprisings, and so forth.

In fact, the Hungarian revolution abounded in armed struggle of various forms and on various scales. Bela Kun wrote,

From the day of the founding of the Communist Party to the taking of power, armed clashes with the organs of bourgeois power occurred with increasing frequency. Starting with December 12, 1918, when the armed Budapest garrison came out into the streets in a demonstration against the War Minister of the Provisional Government, . . . there was probably not a single day on which the press failed to report sanguinary clashes between the revolutionary workers and soldiers and armed units of the government forces, and in particular of the police. The Communists organized numerous uprisings not only in Budapest but in the provinces as well. (Bela Kun, Lessons of the Proletarian Revolution in Hungary, Russian ed., Moscow, 1960, p.57.)

The leaders of the C.P.S.U. are telling a glaring lie when they say that the Hungarian revolution was an example of peaceful transition.

It is alleged in the Soviet press that the Hungarian bourgeois government “voluntarily resigned,”<sup>22</sup> and this is probably the only ground the leaders of the C.P.S.U. base themselves on. But what were the facts?

Karolyi, the head of the Hungarian bourgeois government at the time, was quite explicit on this point. He declared:

I signed a proclamation concerning my own resignation and the transfer of power to the proletariat, which in reality had already taken over and proclaimed power earlier . . . I did not hand over power to the proletariat, as it had already won it earlier, thanks to its planned creation of a socialist army.

For this reason, Bela Kun pointed out that to say the bourgeoisie voluntarily handed political power over to the proletariat was a deceptive "legend." (Bela Kun, Lessons of the Proletarian Revolution in Hungary, Russian ed., Moscow, 1960, p.49.)

The Hungarian revolution of 1919 was defeated. In examining the chief lessons of its defeat, Lenin said that one fatal error committed by the young Hungarian Communist Party was that it was not firm enough in exercising dictatorship over the enemy but wavered at the critical moment. Moreover, the Hungarian Party failed to take correct measures to meet the peasants' demand for the solution of the land problem and therefore divorced itself from the peasantry. Another important reason for the defeat of the revolution was the amalgamation of the Communist Party and the opportunist Social Democratic Party.

It is a sheer distortion of history when the leaders of the C.P.S.U. allege that the Hungarian revolution of 1918-19 is a model of "peaceful transition."

Furthermore, they allege that the working class of Czechoslovakia won "power by the peaceful road."<sup>23</sup> This is another absurd distortion of history.

The people's democratic power in Czechoslovakia was established in the course of the anti-fascist war; it was not taken from the bourgeoisie "peacefully." During World War II, the Communist Party led the people in guerrilla warfare and armed uprisings against the fascists, it destroyed the German fascist troops and their servile regime in Czechoslovakia with the assistance of the Soviet Army and established a national front coalition government. This government was in essence a people's democratic dictatorship under the leadership of the proletariat, i.e., a form of the dictatorship of the proletariat.

In February 1948 the reactionaries inside Czechoslovakia, backed by U.S. imperialism, plotted a counter-revolutionary coup d'etat to overthrow the people's government by an armed rebellion. But the government led by the Communist Party immediately deployed its armed forces and organized armed mass demonstrations, thus shattering the bourgeois plot for a counter-revolutionary comeback. These facts clearly testify that the February event was not a "peaceful" seizure of political power by the working class from the bourgeoisie but a suppression of a counter-revolutionary bourgeois coup d'etat by the working class through its own state apparatus, and mainly through its own armed forces.

In summarizing the February event Gottwald said:

Even before the February event we said: one of the basic changes compared with what existed before the war is precisely that the state apparatus already serves new classes and not the previous ruling classes. The February event showed that the state apparatus, in this sense, played an outstanding role. . . . (Speech at the plenary session of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Czechoslovakia, Nov. 17, 1948.)

How can the above instances be regarded as precedents for peaceful transition?

Lenin said, "Kautsky had to resort to all these subterfuges, sophistries and fraudulent falsifications only in order to dissociate himself from violent revolution, and to conceal his renunciation of it, his desertion to the liberal labour policy, i.e., to the bourgeoisie." And he added, "That is where the trouble lies." ("The Proletarian Revolution and the Renegade Kautsky," Selected Works, F.L.P.H., Moscow, 1952, Vol. 2, Part 2, p.44.)

Why has Khrushchov so shamelessly distorted the works of Marx and Lenin, fabricated history and resorted to subterfuges? Again, that is where the trouble lies.

Lies Cannot Cover Up Reality

The principal argument used by the leaders of the C.P.S.U. to justify their anti-revolutionary line of "peaceful transition" is that historical conditions have changed.

With regard to the appraisal of the changes in historical conditions since World War II and the conclusions to be drawn from them, Marxist-Leninists hold entirely different views from those of Khrushchov.

Marxist-Leninists hold that historical conditions have changed fundamentally since the War. The change is mainly manifested in the great increase in the forces of proletarian socialism and the great weakening of the forces of imperialism. Since the War, the mighty socialist camp and a whole series of new and independent nationalist states have emerged, and there have occurred a continuous succession of armed revolutionary struggles, a new upsurge in the mass movements in capitalist countries and the great expansion of the ranks of the international communist movement. The international proletarian socialist revolutionary movement and the national democratic revolutionary movement in Asia, Africa and Latin America have become the two major historical trends of our time.

In the early postwar period, Comrade Mao Tse-tung repeatedly pointed out that the world balance of forces was favourable to us and not to the enemy, and that this new situation "has opened up still wider possibilities for the emancipation of the working class and the oppressed peoples of the world and has opened up still more realistic paths towards it." ("Revolutionary Forces of the World Unite, Fight Against Imperialist Aggression!", Selected Works, F.L.P., Peking, 1961, Vol. 4, p.224.)

He also indicated,

Make trouble, fail, make trouble again, fail again . . . till their doom; that is the logic of the imperialists and all reactionaries the world over in dealing with the people's cause, and they will never go against this logic. This is a Marxist law. When we say "imperialism is ferocious," we mean that its nature will never change, that the imperialists will never lay down their butcher knives, that they will never become Buddhas, till their doom. ("Cast Away Illusions. Prepare for Struggle." Selected Works, F.L.P., Peking, 1961, Vol. 4, p.428.)

Marxist-Leninists base themselves on the fact that the changes in postwar conditions have become increasingly favourable for revolution and on the law that imperialism and reaction will never change their nature. Therefore they draw the conclusion that revolution must be promoted, and they hold that full use must be made of this very favourable situation and that in the light of the specific conditions in different countries the development of revolutionary struggles must be actively promoted and preparations must be made to seize victory in the revolution.

On the other hand, using the pretext of these very changes in postwar conditions, Khrushchov draws the conclusion that revolution must be opposed and repudiated, and he holds that as a result of the changes in the world balance of forces imperialism and reaction have changed their nature, the law of class struggle has changed, and the common road of the October Revolution and the Marxist-Leninist theory of proletarian revolution have become outmoded.

Khrushchov and his like are spreading an Arabian Nights tale. They maintain, "Now favourable international and internal conditions are taking shape for the working class of a number of capitalist countries to accomplish the socialist revolution in peaceful form."<sup>24</sup>

They say:

In the period between the First and Second World Wars, the reactionary bourgeoisie in many European countries, incessantly developing and perfecting its police-bureaucratic machine, savagely repressed the mass movements of the working people and left no possibility for the achievement of the socialist revolution by the peaceful road.

But according to them the situation has now changed.<sup>25</sup>

They say that "basic shifts in favour of socialism in the relationship of forces in the international arena" now create the possibility of "paralysing the intervention of international reaction in the affairs of countries carrying out revolution,"<sup>26</sup> and that "this lessens the possibilities for the unleashing of civil war by the bourgeoisie."<sup>27</sup>

But the lies of Khrushchov and his like cannot cover up realities.

Two outstanding facts since World War II are that the imperialists and the reactionaries are everywhere reinforcing their apparatus of violence for cruelly suppressing the masses and that imperialism headed by the United States is conducting counter-revolutionary armed intervention in all parts of the world.

Today the United States of America has become more militarized than ever and has increased its troops to over 2,700,000 men, or eleven times the 1934 total and nine times the 1939 total. It has so many police and secret service organizations that even some of the big U.S. capitalists have had to admit that it tops the world in this respect, having far surpassed Hitlerite Germany.

Britain's standing army increased from over 250,000 men in 1934 to over 420,000 in 1963, and its police force from 67,000 in 1934 to 87,000 in 1963.

France's standing army increased from 650,000 in 1934 to over 740,000 in 1963, and its police and security forces from 80,000 in 1934 to 120,000 in 1963.

Other imperialist countries and even the ordinary run of capitalist countries are no exceptions to this large-scale strengthening of the armed forces and police.

Khrushchov is zealously using the slogan of general and complete disarmament to immobilize the people. He has been chanting it for many years now. But in actual fact there is not even a shadow of general and complete disarmament. Everywhere in the imperialist camp headed by the United States one finds a general and complete arms drive and an expansion and strengthening of the apparatus of violent suppression.

Why are the bourgeoisie so frenziedly reinforcing their armed forces and police in peace time? Can it be that their purpose is not to suppress the mass movements of the working people but rather to guarantee that they can win state power by peaceful means? Haven't the ruling bourgeoisie committed enough atrocities in the 19 years since the War in employing soldiers and policemen to suppress striking workers and people struggling for their democratic rights?

In the past 19 years, U.S. imperialism has organized military blocs and concluded military treaties with more than 40 countries. It has set up over 2,200 military bases and installations in all parts of the capitalist world. Its armed forces stationed abroad exceed one million. Its "Strike Command" directs a mobile land and air force, ready at all times to be sent anywhere to suppress the people's revolution.

In the past 19 years, the U.S. and other imperialists have not only given every support to the reactionaries of various countries and helped them to suppress the peoples' revolutionary movements; they have also directly planned and executed numerous counter-revolutionary armed aggressions and interventions, i.e., they have exported counter-revolution. U.S. imperialism, for instance, helped Chiang Kai-shek fight the civil war in China, sent its own troops to Greece and commanded the attack on the Greek people's liberated areas, unleashed the war of aggression in Korea, landed troops in Lebanon to threaten the revolution in Iraq, aided and abetted the Laotian reactionaries in extending civil war, organized and directed a so-called United Nations force to suppress the national-independence movement in the Congo, and conducted counter-revolutionary invasions of Cuba. It is still fighting to suppress the liberation struggle of the people of south Viet Nam. Recently it has used armed force to suppress the just struggle of the Panamanian people in defence of their sovereignty and participated in the armed intervention in Cyprus.

Not only does U.S. imperialism take determined action to suppress and intervene in all people's revolutions and national-liberation movements, but it also tries to get rid of bourgeois regimes which show some nationalist colouration. During these 19 years, the U.S. Government has engineered numerous counter-revolutionary military coups d'état in a number of countries in Asia, Africa and Latin America. It has even used violence to remove puppets of its own fostering, such as Ngo Dinh Diem, once they have ceased to suit its purposes—"kill the donkey as soon as you take it from the mill-stone," as the saying goes.

Facts have demonstrated that nowadays in order to make revolutions and achieve liberation all oppressed peoples and nations not only have to cope with violent suppression by the domestic reactionary ruling classes, but must prepare themselves fully against armed intervention by imperialism, and especially U.S. imperialism. Without such preparation and without steadfastly rebuffing counter-revolutionary violence by revolutionary violence whenever necessary, revolution, let alone victory, is out of the question.

Without strengthening their armed forces, without preparing to meet imperialist armed aggression and intervention and without adhering to the policy of waging struggles against imperialism, countries which have won independence will not be able to safeguard their national independence and still less to ensure the advance of the revolutionary cause.

We would like to ask the leaders of the C.P.S.U.: Since you talk so glibly about the new features of the postwar situation, why have you chosen to omit the most important and conspicuous one, namely, that the U.S. and other imperialists are suppressing revolution everywhere? You never weary of talking about peaceful transition, but why have you never had a single word to say about how to deal with the bloated apparatus of forcible suppression built up by the imperialists and reactionaries? You brazenly cover up the bloody realities of the cruel suppression of the national-liberation and popular revolutionary movements by imperialism and reaction and spread the illusion that the oppressed nations and peoples can achieve victory by peaceful means. Isn't it obvious that you are trying to lull the vigilance of the people, pacify the angry masses with empty promises about the bright future and oppose their revolution, thus in fact acting as accomplices of imperialism and the reactionaries of all countries?

On this question, it is useful to let John Foster Dulles, the late U.S. Secretary of State, be our "teacher by negative example."

Dulles said in a speech on June 21, 1956, that all socialist countries had hitherto been established "through the use of violence." He then said that "the Soviet rulers now say that they will renounce the use of violence" and that "we welcome and shall encourage these developments."<sup>28</sup>

As a faithful champion of the capitalist system, Dulles was of course perfectly aware of the essential role of force in class struggle. While welcoming Khrushchov's renunciation of violent revolution, he laid great stress on the bourgeoisie's need to strengthen its counter-revolutionary violence in order to maintain its rule. He said in another speech that "of all the tasks of government the most basic is to protect its citizens [read "reactionary ruling classes"] against violence. . . . So in every civilized community the members contribute toward the maintenance of a police force as an arm of law and order."<sup>29</sup>

Here Dulles was telling the truth. The political foundation of the rule of imperialism and all reaction is nothing other than—"a police force." So long as this foundation is unimpaired, nothing else is of any importance and their rule will not be shaken. The more the leaders of the C.P.S.U. cover up the fact that the bourgeoisie relies on violence for its rule and spread the fairy tale of peaceful transition, which was so welcome to Dulles, the more they reveal their true colours as cronies of the imperialists in opposing revolution.

Refutation of the "Parliamentary Road"

The idea of the "parliamentary road" which was publicized by the revisionists of the Second International was thoroughly refuted by Lenin and discredited long ago. But in Khrushchov's eyes, the parliamentary road seems suddenly to have acquired validity after World War II.

Is this true? Of course not.

Events since World War II have demonstrated yet again that the chief component of the bourgeois state machine is armed force and not parliament. Parliament is only an ornament and a screen for bourgeois rule. To adopt or discard the parliamentary system, to grant parliament greater or less power, to adopt one kind of electoral law or another—the choice between these alternatives is always dictated by the needs and interests of bourgeois rule. So long as the bourgeoisie controls the military-bureaucratic apparatus, either the acquisition of a "stable majority in parliament" by the proletariat through elections is impossible, or this "stable majority" is undependable. To realize socialism through the "parliamentary road" is utterly impossible and is mere deceptive talk.

About half the Communist Parties in the capitalist countries are still illegal. Since these Parties have no legal status, the winning of a parliamentary majority is, of course, out of the question.

For example, the Communist Party of Spain lives under White terror and has no opportunity to run in elections. It is pathetic and tragic that Spanish communist leaders like Ibarri should follow Khrushchov in advocating "peaceful transition" in Spain.

With all the unfair restrictions imposed by bourgeois electoral laws in those capitalist countries where Communist Parties are legal and can take part in elections, it is very difficult for them to win a majority of the votes under bourgeois rule. And even if they get a majority of the votes, the bourgeoisie can prevent them from obtaining a majority of the seats in parliament by revising the electoral laws or by other means.

For example, since World War II, the French monopoly capitalists have twice revised the electoral law, in each case bringing about a sharp fall in the parliamentary seats held by the Communist Party of France. In the parliamentary election in 1946, the C.P.F. gained 182 seats. But in the election of 1951, the revision of the electoral law by the monopoly capitalists resulted in a sharp reduction in the number of C.P.F. seats to 103, that is, there was a loss of 79 seats. In the 1956 election, the C.P.F. gained 150 seats. But before the parliamentary election in 1958, the monopoly capitalists again revised the electoral law with the result that the number of seats held by the C.P.F. fell very drastically to 10, that is, it lost 140 seats.

Even if in certain circumstances a Communist Party should win a majority of the seats in parliament or participate in the government as a result of an electoral victory, it would not change the bourgeois nature of parliament or government, still less would it mean the smashing of the old and the establishment of a new state machine. It is absolutely impossible to bring about a fundamental social change by relying on bourgeois parliaments or governments. With the state machine under its control the reactionary bourgeoisie can nullify elections, dissolve parliament, expel Communists from the government, outlaw the Communist Party and resort to brute force to suppress the masses and the progressive forces.

For instance, in 1946 the Communist Party of Chile supported the bourgeois Radical Party in winning an electoral victory, and a coalition government was formed with the participation of Communists. At the time, the leaders of the Chilean Communist Party went so far as to describe this bourgeois-controlled government as a "people's democratic government." But in less than a year the bourgeoisie compelled them to quit the government, carried out mass arrests of Communists and in 1948 outlawed the Communist Party.

When a workers' party degenerates and becomes a hireling of the bourgeoisie, the latter may permit it to have a majority in parliament and to form a government. This is the case with the bourgeois social-democratic parties in certain countries. But this sort of thing only serves to safeguard and consolidate the dictatorship of the bourgeoisie; it does not, and cannot, in the least alter the position of the proletariat as an oppressed and exploited class. Such facts only add testimony to the bankruptcy of the parliamentary road.

Events since World War II have also shown that if communist leaders believe in the parliamentary road and fall victim to the incurable disease of "parliamentary cretinism," they will not only get nowhere but will inevitably sink into the quagmire of revisionism and ruin the revolutionary cause of the proletariat.

There has always been a fundamental difference between Marxist-Leninists on the one hand and opportunists and revisionists on the other on the proper attitude to adopt towards bourgeois parliaments.

Marxist-Leninists have always held that under certain conditions the proletarian party should take part in parliamentary struggle and utilize the platform of parliament for exposing the reactionary nature of the bourgeoisie, educating the masses and helping to accumulate revolutionary strength. It is wrong to refuse to utilize this legal form of struggle when necessary. But the proletarian party must never substitute parliamentary struggle for proletarian revolution or entertain the illusion that the transition to socialism can be achieved through the parliamentary road. It must at all times concentrate on mass struggles.

Lenin said:

The party of the revolutionary proletariat must take part in bourgeois parliamentarism in order to enlighten the masses, which can be done during elections and in the struggle between parties in parliament. But to limit the class struggle to the parliamentary struggle, or to regard the latter as the highest and decisive form, to which all the other forms of struggle are subordinate, means actually deserting to the side of the bourgeoisie and going against the proletariat. (The Constituent Assembly Elections and the Dictatorship of the Proletariat, F.L.P.H., Moscow, 1954, p.36.)

He denounced the revisionists of the Second International for chasing the shadow of parliamentarism and for abandoning the revolutionary task of seizing state power. They converted the proletarian party into an electoral party, a parliamentary party, an appendage of the bourgeoisie and an instrument for preserving the dictatorship of the bourgeoisie. In advocating the parliamentary road, Khrushchev and his followers can only meet with the same fate as that of the revisionists of the Second International.

Refutation of "Opposition to Left Opportunism"

The open letter of the Central Committee of the C.P.S.U. fabricates a tissue of lies in its treatment of the question of proletarian revolution. It asserts that the Chinese Communist Party favours "advancing the slogan of immediate proletarian revolution" even in the absence of a revolutionary situation, that it stands for abandoning "the struggle for the democratic rights and vital interests of the working people in capitalist countries,"<sup>30</sup> that it makes armed struggle "absolute,"<sup>31</sup> and so on. They frequently pin such labels as "Left opportunism," "Left adventurism" and "Trotskyism" on the Chinese Communist Party.

The truth is that the leaders of the C.P.S.U. are making this hullabaloo in order to cover up their revisionist line which opposes and repudiates revolution. What they are attacking as "Left opportunism" is in fact nothing but the Marxist-Leninist revolutionary line.

We have always maintained that a revolution cannot be made at will and is impossible unless a revolutionary situation objectively exists. But the outbreak and the victory of revolution depend not only on the existence of a revolutionary situation but also on the preparations and efforts made by the subjective revolutionary forces.

It is "Left" adventurism if the party of the proletariat does not accurately appraise both the objective conditions and subjective forces making for revolution and if it rashly launches a revolution before the conditions are ripe. But it is Right opportunism, or revisionism, if the proletarian party makes no active preparations for revolution before the conditions are ripe, or dare not lead a revolution and seize state power when a revolutionary situation exists and the conditions are ripe.

Until the time arrives for seizing state power, the fundamental and most important task for the proletarian party is to concentrate on the painstaking work of accumulating revolutionary strength. The active leadership given in day-to-day struggle must have as its central aim the building up of revolutionary strength and the preparations for seizing victory in the revolution when the conditions are ripe. The proletarian party should use the various forms of day-to-day struggle to raise the political consciousness of the proletariat and the masses of the people, to train its own class forces, to temper its fighting capacity and to prepare for revolution ideologically, politically, organizationally and militarily. It is only in this way that it will not miss the opportunity of seizing victory when the conditions for revolution are ripe. Otherwise, the proletarian party will simply let the opportunity of making revolution slip by even when a revolutionary situation objectively exists.

While tirelessly stressing that no revolution should be made in the absence of a revolutionary situation, the leaders of the C.P.S.U. avoid the question of how the party of the proletariat should conduct day-to-day revolutionary struggle and accumulate revolutionary strength before there is a revolutionary situation. In reality, they are renouncing the task of building up revolutionary strength and preparing for revolution on the pretext of the absence of a revolutionary situation.

Lenin once gave an excellent description of the renegade Kautsky's attitude towards the question of a revolutionary situation. He said of Kautsky that if the revolutionary crisis has arrived, "then he too is prepared to become a revolutionary! But then, let us observe, every blackguard . . . would proclaim himself a revolutionary! If it has not, then Kautsky will turn his back on revolution!" As Lenin pointed out, Kautsky was like a typical philistine, and the difference between a revolutionary Marxist and a philistine is that the Marxist has the courage to "prepare the proletariat and all the toiling and exploited masses for it [revolution]." ("The Proletarian Revolution and the Renegade Kautsky," Collected Works, International Publishers, New York, 1945, Vol. 23, pp.403-404.) People can judge for themselves whether or not Khrushchov and his followers resemble the Kautsky type of philistine denounced by Lenin.

We have always held that the proletarian parties in the capitalist countries must actively lead the working class and the working people in struggles to oppose monopoly capital, to defend democratic rights, to improve living conditions, to oppose imperialist arms expansion and war preparations, to defend world peace and to give vigorous support to the revolutionary struggles of the oppressed nations.

In the capitalist countries which are subject to bullying, control, intervention and aggression by U.S. imperialism, the proletarian parties should raise the national banner of opposition to U.S. imperialism and direct the edge of the mass struggle mainly against U.S. imperialism as well as against monopoly capital and other reactionary forces at home which are betraying the national interests. They should unite all the forces that can be united and form a united front against U.S. imperialism and its lackeys.

In recent years the working class and the working people in many capitalist countries have been waging broad mass struggles which not only hit monopoly capital and other reactionary forces at home, but render powerful support to the revolutionary struggles of the Asian, African and Latin American peoples and to the countries of the socialist camp. We have always fully appreciated this contribution.

While actively leading immediate struggles, Communists should link them with the struggle for long-range and general interests, educate the masses in a proletarian revolutionary spirit, ceaselessly raise their political consciousness and accumulate revolutionary strength in order to seize victory in revolution when the time is opportune. Our view is in full accord with Marxism-Leninism.

In opposition to the views of Marxist-Leninists, the leaders of the C.P.S.U. spread the notion that "in the highly developed capitalist countries, democratic and socialist tasks are so closely intertwined that there, least of all, is it possible to draw any sort of lines of demarcation."<sup>32</sup> This is to substitute immediate for long-range struggles and reformism for proletarian revolution.

Lenin said that "no reform can be durable, genuine and serious if it is not supported by the revolutionary methods of struggle of the masses." A workers' party that "does not combine this struggle for reforms with the revolutionary methods of the workers' movement may be transformed into a sect, and may become torn away from the masses, and . . . this is the most serious threat to the success of genuine revolutionary socialism." ("To the Secretary of the 'Socialist Propaganda League,'" Collected Works, 4th Russian ed., Moscow, Vol. 21, p.389.)

He said that "every democratic demand . . . is, for the class conscious workers, subordinated to the higher interests of socialism." ("A Caricature of Marxism and 'Imperialist Economism,'" Selected Works, International Publishers, New York, 1943, Vol. 5, p.292.) Further, in The State and Revolution Lenin quoted Engels as follows. The forgetfulness of the great main standpoint in the momentary interests of the day, the struggling and striving for the success of the moment without consideration for the later consequences, the sacrifice of the future of the movement for its present was opportunism, and dangerous opportunism at that.

It was precisely on this ground that Lenin criticized Kautsky for "praising reformism and submission to the imperialist bourgeoisie, and blaming and renouncing revolution." He said that "the proletariat fights for the revolutionary overthrow of the imperialist bourgeoisie," while Kautsky "fights for the reformist 'improvement' of imperialism, for adaptation to it, while submitting to it." ("The Proletarian Revolution and the Renegade Kautsky," Against Revisionism, F.L.P.H., Moscow, 1959, p.441 and p.440.)

Lenin's criticism of Kautsky is an apt portrayal of the present leaders of the C.P.S.U.

We have always held that in order to lead the working class and the masses of the people in revolution, the party of the proletariat must master all forms of struggle and be able to combine different forms, swiftly substituting one form for another as the conditions of struggle change. It will be invincible in all circumstances only if it masters all forms of struggle, such as peaceful and armed, open and secret, legal and illegal, parliamentary and mass struggle, as well as both domestic and international struggle.

The victory of the Chinese revolution was precisely the result of the skilful and thorough mastery of all forms of struggle — in keeping with the specific characteristics of the Chinese revolution — by the Communists of China who learnt from the historical experience of international proletarian struggle. Armed struggle was the chief form in the Chinese revolution, but the revolution could not have been victorious without the use of other forms of struggle.

In the course of the Chinese revolution the Chinese Communist Party fought on two fronts. It fought both the Right deviation of legalism and the "Left" illegalist deviation, and properly combined legal with illegal struggle. In the country as a whole, it correctly combined struggle in the revolutionary base areas with struggle in the Kuomintang areas, while in the Kuomintang areas it correctly combined open and secret work, made full use of legal opportunities and kept strictly to Party rules governing secret work. The Chinese revolution has brought forth a complexity and variety of forms of struggle suited to its own specific conditions.

From its long practical experience, the Chinese Communist Party is fully aware that it is wrong to reject legal struggle, to restrict the Party's work within narrow confines and thereby to alienate itself from the masses. But one should never tolerate the legalism peddled by the revisionists. The revisionists reject armed struggle and all other illegal struggle, engage only in legal struggle and activity and confine the Party's activities and mass struggles within the framework allowed by the ruling classes. They debase and even discard the Party's basic programme, renounce revolution and adapt themselves solely to reactionary systems of law.

As Lenin rightly pointed out in his criticism, revisionists such as Kautsky were degraded and dulled by bourgeois legality. "For a mess of pottage given to the organizations that are recognized by the present police law, the proletarian right of revolution was sold." ("The Collapse of the Second International," Collected Works, International Publishers, New York, 1930, Vol. 18, p.314.)

While the leaders of the C.P.S.U. and their followers talk about the use of all forms of struggle, in reality they stand for legalism and discard the objective of the proletarian revolution on the pretext of changing forms of struggle. This is again substituting Kautskyism for Leninism.

The leaders of the C.P.S.U. often make use of Lenin's great work, "Left-Wing" Communism, An Infantile Disorder, to justify their erroneous line and have made it a "basis" for their attacks on the Chinese Communist Party.

This is of course futile. Like all his other works, this book of Lenin's can only serve as a weapon for Marxist-Leninists in the fight against various kinds of opportunism and can never serve as an instrument of revisionist apologetics.

When Lenin criticized the "Left-wing" infantile disorder and asked the party of the proletariat to be skilful in applying revolutionary tactics and to do better in preparing for revolutions, he had already broken with the revisionists of the Second International and had founded the Third International.

Indeed, in "Left-Wing" Communism he stated that the main enemy of the international working-class movement at the time was Kautsky's type of opportunism. He repeatedly stressed that unless a break was made with revisionism there could be no talk of how to master revolutionary tactics.

Those comrades whom Lenin criticized for their "Left-wing" infantile disorder all wanted revolution, while the latter-day revisionist Khrushchov is against it, has therefore to be included in the same category as Kautsky and has no right whatsoever to speak on the question of combating the "Left-wing" infantile disorder.

It is most absurd for the leadership of the C.P.S.U. to pin the label of "Trotskyism" on the Chinese Communist Party. In fact, it is Khrushchov himself who has succeeded to the mantle of Trotskyism and who stands with the Trotskyites of today.

Trotskyism manifests itself in different ways on different questions and often wears the mask of "ultra-Leftism," but its essence is opposition to revolution, repudiation of revolution.

As far as the fundamental fact of their opposition to the proletarian revolution and the dictatorship of the proletariat is concerned, Trotskyism and the revisionism of the Second International are virtually the same. This is why Stalin repeatedly said that Trotskyism is a variety of Menshevism, is Kautskyism and social democracy, and is the advanced detachment of the counter-revolutionary bourgeoisie.

In its essence, the present-day revisionism of Khrushchov also opposes and repudiates revolution. Therefore, the only logical conclusion is that Khrushchov's revisionism is not only cut from the same cloth as Kautskyism, but also converges with Trotskyism to oppose revolution. Khrushchov had better pin the label of Trotskyism on himself.

Two Different Lines, Two Different Results

History is the most telling witness. Rich experience has been gained since World War II both in the international communist movement and in the peoples' revolutionary struggles. There has been successful as well as unsuccessful experience. Communists and the revolutionary people of all countries need to draw the right conclusions from this historical experience.

The countries in Eastern Europe, Asia and Latin America which have succeeded in making a socialist revolution since the War have done so by following the revolutionary Marxist-Leninist line and the road of the October Revolution. Now, in addition to the experience of the October Revolution, there is the experience of the revolutions of China, the socialist countries in Eastern Europe, Korea, Viet Nam and Cuba. The victorious revolutions in these countries have enriched and developed Marxism-Leninism and the experience of the October Revolution.

From China to Cuba, all these revolutions without exception were won by armed struggle and by fighting against armed imperialist aggression and intervention.

The Chinese people were victorious in their revolution after waging revolutionary wars for 22 years, including the three years of the People's Liberation War, in which they thoroughly defeated the Chiang Kai-shek reactionaries who were backed up to the hilt by U.S. imperialism.

The Korean people carried on 15 years of revolutionary armed struggle against Japanese imperialism beginning in the 1930s, built up and expanded their revolutionary armed forces, and finally achieved victory with the help of the Soviet Army. After the founding of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, it took another three years of war against U.S. imperialist armed aggression before the victory of their revolution could be consolidated.

The Vietnamese people seized state power by the armed uprising of August 1945. Immediately afterwards, they had to begin fighting a war of national liberation lasting eight years against French imperialism and to defeat the U.S. imperialist military intervention, and only then did they triumph in northern Viet Nam. The people of southern Viet Nam are still waging a heroic struggle against U.S. imperialist armed aggression.

The Cuban people started their armed uprising in 1953, and later it took more than two years of people's revolutionary war before they overthrew the rule of U.S. imperialism and its Cuban puppet, Batista. After their victorious revolution, the Cuban people smashed armed invasions by U.S. imperialist mercenaries and safeguarded the fruits of revolution.

The other socialist countries too were all established through armed struggle.

What are the main lessons of the successful proletarian revolutions in the countries extending from China to Cuba after World War II?

1. Violent revolution is a universal law of proletarian revolution. To realize the transition to socialism, the proletariat must wage armed struggle, smash the old state machine and establish the dictatorship of the proletariat.

2. The peasants are the most dependable allies of the proletariat. The proletariat must closely rely on the peasants, establish a broad united front based on the worker-peasant alliance, and insist upon proletarian leadership in the revolution.

3. U.S. imperialism is the arch enemy of people's revolution in all countries. The proletariat must hold high the national banner of opposition to U.S. imperialism and have the courage to fight with firm resolve against the U.S. imperialists and their lackeys in its own country.

4. The revolution of the oppressed nations is an indispensable ally of the proletarian revolution. The workers of all countries must unite, and they must unite with all the oppressed nations and all the forces opposed to imperialism and its lackeys to form a broad international united front.

5. To make a revolution, it is essential to have a revolutionary party. The triumph of the proletarian revolution and the triumph of the dictatorship of the proletariat are impossible without a revolutionary proletarian party established in accordance with the revolutionary theory and style of Marxism-Leninism, a party which is irreconcilable towards revisionism and opportunism and which takes a revolutionary attitude towards the reactionary ruling classes and their state power.

To insist on revolutionary armed struggle is of primary importance not only to the proletarian revolution but also to the national-democratic revolution of the oppressed nations. The victory of the Algerian national-liberation war has set a good example in this respect.

The whole history of the proletarian parties since the War has shown that those parties which have followed the line of revolution, adopted the correct strategy and tactics and actively led the masses in revolutionary struggle are able to lead the revolutionary cause forward step by step to victory and grow vigorously in strength. Conversely, all those parties which have adopted a non-revolutionary opportunist line and accepted Khrushchov's line of "peaceful transition" are doing serious damage to the revolutionary cause and turning themselves into lifeless and reformist parties, or becoming completely degenerate and serving as tools of the bourgeoisie against the proletariat. There is no lack of such instances.

The comrades of the Communist Party of Iraq were once full of revolutionary ardour. But acceptance of Khrushchov's revisionist line was forced on them by outside pressure, and they lost their vigilance against counter-revolution. In the armed counter-revolutionary coup d'état, leading comrades heroically sacrificed their lives, thousands of Iraqi Communists and revolutionaries were massacred in cold blood, the powerful Iraqi Communist Party was dispersed, and the revolutionary cause of Iraq suffered a grave setback. This is a tragic lesson in the annals of proletarian revolution, a lesson written in blood.

The leaders of the Algerian Communist Party danced to the baton of Khrushchov and of the leadership of the French Communist Party and completely accepted the revisionist line against armed struggle. But the Algerian people refused to listen to this rubbish. They courageously fought for national independence against imperialism, waged a war of national liberation for over seven years and finally compelled the French Government to recognize Algeria's independence. But the Algerian Communist Party, which followed the revisionist line of the leadership of the C.P.S.U., forfeited the confidence of the Algerian people and its position in Algerian political life.

During the Cuban revolution, some leaders of the Popular Socialist Party refused to pursue the revolutionary Marxist-Leninist line, the correct line of revolutionary armed struggle, but, following Khrushchov's revisionist line, advocated "peaceful transition" and opposed violent revolution. In these circumstances, Marxist-Leninists outside and inside the Cuban Party, represented by Comrade Fidel Castro, rightly bypassed those leaders who opposed violent revolution, joined hands and made revolution with the revolutionary Cuban people, and finally won a victory of great historic significance.

Certain leaders of the Communist Party of France of whom Thorez is representative have long been pursuing a revisionist line, have publicized the "parliamentary road" in response to Khrushchov's baton, and have actually reduced the Communist Party to the level of a social democratic party. They have ceased to give active support to the revolutionary aspirations of the people and rolled up the national banner of opposition to U.S. imperialism. The result of their pursuit of this revisionist line is that the Communist Party, which once had great influence among the people, has become increasingly isolated from the masses and has deteriorated more and more.

Certain leaders of the Indian Communist Party, typified by Dange, have long pursued a revisionist line, hauled down the banner of revolution and failed to lead the masses in national and democratic revolutionary struggles. The Dange clique has slid farther and farther down the path of revisionism and degenerated into national chauvinists, into tools of the reactionary policies of India's big landlords and big bourgeoisie, and into renegades from the proletariat.

The record shows that the two fundamentally different lines lead to two fundamentally different results. All these lessons merit close study.

From Browder and Tito to Khrushchov

Khrushchov's revisionism has deep historical and social roots and bears the imprint of the times. As Lenin said, "opportunism is no accident, no sin, no slip, no betrayal on the part of individual persons, but the social product of a whole historical epoch." ("The Collapse of the Second International," Collected Works, International Publishers, New York, 1930, Vol. 18, p.310.)

While making great progress since World War II, the international communist movement has produced its antithesis within its own ranks—an adverse current of revisionism which is opposed to socialism, Marxism-Leninism and proletarian revolution. This adverse current was chiefly represented first by Browder, later by Tito and now by Khrushchov. Khrushchov's revisionism is nothing but the continuation and development of Browderism and Titoism.

Browder began to reveal his revisionism around 1935. He worshipped bourgeois democracy, abandoned making the necessary criticisms of the bourgeois government and regarded the dictatorship of the bourgeoisie as a fine thing for Communists, his slogan being "Communism Is Twentieth Century Americanism."<sup>33</sup>

With the formation of the international and domestic anti-fascist united fronts during World War II, he became obsessed with bourgeois "democracy," "progress" and "reason," prostrated himself before the bourgeoisie and degenerated into an out-and-out capitulationist.

Browder propagated a whole set of revisionist views which embellished the bourgeoisie and opposed and negated revolution.

He declared that the Teheran Declaration of the Soviet Union, the United States and Britain ushered in an epoch of "long-term confidence and collaboration" between capitalism and socialism and was capable of guaranteeing "a stable peace for generations."<sup>34</sup>

He spread the notion that the international agreements of the Soviet Union, the United States and Britain represented "the most vital interests of every nation and every people in the world without exception"<sup>35</sup> and that the perspective of inner chaos "is incompatible with the perspective of international order." Therefore, it was necessary to oppose "an explosion of class conflict" within the country and "to minimize, and to place definite limits upon" internal class struggle.<sup>36</sup>

He spread the view that a new war would be "a real catastrophic smash-up of a large part of the world" and "may throw . . . most of the world back into barbarism for 50 or 100 years," and that the "emphasis upon agreement that transcends all class divisions"<sup>37</sup> was necessary in order to wipe out the disaster of war.

He advocated relying "entirely upon democratic persuasion and conviction"<sup>38</sup> to realize socialism, and declared that after World War II certain countries "have gained the conditions in which a peaceful transition to socialism has become possible."<sup>39</sup>

He negated the independent role of the proletarian parties, saying that "the practical political aims they [the Communists] hold will for a long time be in agreement on all essential points with the aims of a much larger body of non-Communists."<sup>40</sup>

Guided by these ideas, he dissolved the Communist Party of the U.S.A.

For a time, Browder's revisionism led the revolutionary cause of the American proletariat to the brink of the precipice, and it contaminated the proletarian parties of other countries with the poison of liquidationism.

Browder's revisionist line was opposed by many American Communists headed by Comrade William Z. Foster and was rejected and repudiated by many fraternal Parties. However, the revisionist trend represented by Browderism was not thoroughly criticized and liquidated by the international communist movement as a whole. In the new circumstances after the War, the revisionist trend developed anew among the communist ranks in certain countries.

In the capitalist countries, the growth of the revisionist trend first manifested itself in the fact that the leaders of certain Communist Parties abandoned the revolutionary Marxist-Leninist line and embraced the line of "peaceful transition." This line is clearly typified in Togliatti's theory of structural reform, which advocates the proletariat's attainment of the leadership of the state through the legal channels of bourgeois democracy and the socialist transformation of the national economy through such nationalization and planning as serve monopoly capital. According to this line, it is possible to establish new socialist relations of production and make the transition to socialism without smashing the bourgeois state machine. In practice, this amounts to making communism degenerate into social democracy.

In the socialist countries, the revisionist trend first appeared in Yugoslavia. Capitulation to U.S. imperialism is an important characteristic of Titoite revisionism. The Tito clique have sold themselves body and soul to U.S. imperialism; they have not only restored capitalism in Yugoslavia, but have become an imperialist instrument for undermining the socialist camp and the international communist movement and are playing the role of a special detachment of U.S. imperialism for sabotaging world revolution.

In their efforts to serve U.S. imperialism and to oppose and abolish proletarian revolution, the Tito clique have outspokenly asserted that violent revolution has become "increasingly superfluous as a means of resolving social contradictions"<sup>41</sup> and that the "evolutionary process of development toward socialism" through a bourgeois parliament "is not only possible but has already become a real fact."<sup>42</sup> They virtually equate capitalism with socialism, asserting that the present-day world "as a whole has deeply 'plunged' into socialism, become socialist."<sup>43</sup> They also say that "now the question—socialism or capitalism—is already solved on a world scale."<sup>44</sup>

Browderite revisionism, the theory of structural reform and Titoite revisionism—these have been the chief manifestations of the revisionist trend since World War II.

Between the 20th and the 22nd Congresses of the C.P.S.U., Khrushchov's revisionist line of "peaceful transition," "peaceful coexistence" and "peaceful competition" became a complete system. He has been hawking this stuff everywhere as his "new creation." Yet it is nothing new but is merely a rehashed and meretricious combination of Browderite revisionism, the theory of structural reform and Titoite revisionism. In international relations, Khrushchov's revisionism practises capitulation to U.S. imperialism; in the imperialist and capitalist countries it practises capitulation to the reactionary ruling classes; in the socialist countries it encourages the development of capitalist forces.

If Bernstein, Kautsky and the other revisionists of the Second International ran in a single line and belonged to the same family around the time of World War I, then the same is true of Browder, Tito and Khrushchov after World War II.

Browder has made this point clear. He wrote in 1960, "Khrushchov has now adopted the 'heresy' for which I was kicked out of the Communist Party in 1945." And he added that Khrushchov's new policy "is almost word for word the same line I advocated fifteen years ago. So my crime has become—at least for the moment—the new orthodoxy."<sup>45</sup>

Khrushchov himself has admitted that he and the Tito clique "belong to one and the same idea and are guided by the same theory."<sup>46</sup>

In the nature of the case, Khrushchov's revisionism is even more pernicious than the revisionism of Bernstein, Kautsky, Browder and Tito. Why? Because the U.S.S.R. is the first socialist state, a large country in the socialist camp and the native land of Leninism. The C.P.S.U. is a large Party created by Lenin and in the international communist movement it enjoys a prestige shaped by history. Khrushchov is exploiting his position as the leader of the C.P.S.U. and of the Soviet Union to push through his revisionist line.

He describes his revisionist line as a "Leninist" line and utilizes the prestige of the great Lenin and of the great Bolshevik Party to confuse and deceive people.

Exploiting the inherited prestige of the C.P.S.U. and the position of a large Party and a large country, he has been waving his baton and employing all kinds of political, economic and diplomatic measures to force others to accept his revisionist line.

In line with the imperialist policy of buying over the labour aristocracy, he is buying over certain bourgeoisified Communists in the international communist movement who have betrayed Marxism-Leninism and inducing them to acclaim and serve the anti-revolutionary line of the leaders of the C.P.S.U.

That is why all other revisionists, whether past or present, are dwarfed by Khrushchov

As the Declaration of 1957 points out, the social source of modern revisionism is surrender to external imperialist pressure and acceptance of domestic bourgeois influence.

Like the old-line revisionists, the modern revisionists answer to the description given by Lenin: ". . . objectively, they are a political detachment of the bourgeoisie . . . they are transmitters of its influence, its agents in the labour movement." ("The Collapse of the Second International," Collected Works, International Publishers, New York, 1930, Vol. 18, p.310.)

The economic basis of the emergence of modern revisionism, like that of old-line revisionism, is in the words of Lenin "an insignificant section of the 'top' of the labour movement." ("Opportunism and the Collapse of the Second International," Collected Works, International Publishers, New York, 1930, Vol. 18, p.389.)

Modern revisionism is the product of the policies of imperialism and of international monopoly capital which are both headed by the United States. Terrified by the policy of nuclear blackmail and corrupted by the policy of buying over, the modern revisionists are serving as the pawns of U.S. imperialism and its servile followers in opposing revolution.

The revisionist Khrushchov is also scared out of his wits by the hysterical war cries of the U.S. imperialists, and he thinks that this "Noah's ark," the earth, is threatened with destruction at any moment and he has completely lost confidence in the future of mankind. Proceeding from national egoism, he fears that revolutions by the oppressed classes and nations might create trouble for him and implicate him. Therefore, he tries to oppose every revolution by all means and, as in the case of the Congo, does not scruple to take joint action with U.S. imperialism in stamping out a people's revolution. He thinks that by so doing he can avoid risks and at the same time conspire with U.S. imperialism to divide the world into spheres of influence, thus killing two birds with one stone. All this only goes to show that Khrushchov is the greatest capitulationist in history. The enforcement of Khrushchov's pernicious policy will inevitably result in inestimable damage to the great Soviet Union itself.

Why has Khrushchov's revisionism emerged in the Soviet Union, a socialist state with a history of several decades? Actually, this is not so strange. For in every socialist country the question of who wins over whom — socialism or capitalism — can only be gradually settled over a very long historical period. So long as there are capitalist forces and there are classes in society, there is soil for the growth of revisionism.

Khrushchov asserts that in the Soviet Union classes have been abolished, the danger of capitalist restoration is ruled out and the building of communism is under way. All these assertions are lies.

In fact, as a result of Khrushchov's revisionist rule, of the open declaration that the Soviet state has changed its nature and is no longer a dictatorship of the proletariat, and of the execution of a whole series of erroneous domestic and foreign policies, the capitalist forces in Soviet society have become a deluge sweeping over all fields of life in the U.S.S.R., including the political, economic, cultural and ideological fields. The social source of Khrushchov's revisionism lies precisely in the capitalist forces which are ceaselessly spreading in the Soviet Union.

Khrushchov's revisionism represents and serves these capitalist forces. Therefore, it will never bring communism to the Soviet people; on the contrary, it is seriously jeopardizing the fruits of socialism and is opening the floodgates for the restoration of capitalism. This is the very road of "peaceful evolution" craved by U.S. imperialism.

The whole history of the dictatorship of the proletariat tells us that peaceful transition from capitalism to socialism is impossible. However, there is already the Yugoslav precedent for the "peaceful evolution" of socialism back into capitalism. Now Khrushchov's revisionism is leading the Soviet Union along this road.

This is the gravest lesson in the history of the dictatorship of the proletariat. All Marxist-Leninists, all revolutionaries and the generations to come must under no circumstances forget this great lesson.

Our Hopes

Only eight years have elapsed since the 20th Congress of the C.P.S.U. In this extremely short period of history, Khrushchov's revisionism has inflicted very great and grave damage on the Soviet Union and the revolutionary cause of the international proletariat.

Now is the time—now it is high time—to repudiate and liquidate Khrushchov's revisionism!

Here, we would give the leading comrades of the C.P.S.U. a piece of advice: Since so many opportunists and revisionists have been thrown on to the rubbish heap of history, why must you obstinately follow their example?

Here, too, we express the hope that those leading comrades of other fraternal Parties who have committed revisionist errors will think this over: What have they gained by following the revisionist line of the leaders of the C.P.S.U.? We understand that, excepting those who have fallen deep into the revisionist quagmire, quite a number of comrades have been confused and deceived, or compelled to follow the wrong path. We believe that all those who are proletarian revolutionaries will eventually choose the revolutionary line and reject the anti-revolutionary line, will eventually choose Marxism-Leninism and reject revisionism. We entertain very great hopes in this regard.

Revisionism can never stop the wheel of history, the wheel of revolution. Revisionist leaders who do not make revolution themselves can never prevent the genuine Marxists and the revolutionary people from rising in revolution. In The Proletarian Revolution and the Renegade Kautsky Lenin wrote that when Kautsky became a renegade, the German Marxist Liebknecht could only express his appeal to the working class in this way — "to push aside such 'leaders,' to free themselves from their stultifying and debasing propaganda, to rise in revolt in spite of them, without them, and march over their heads towards revolution!" (Selected Works, F.L.P.H., Moscow, 1952, Vol. 2, Part 2, p.105.)

When the Second International's brand of revisionism prevailed in many Parties in Europe, Lenin attached great significance to the views of the French Communist Paul Golay.

Golay said:

Our adversaries talked loudly of the bankruptcy of Socialism. That is going a bit too fast. Still, who would dare to assert that they are entirely wrong? What is dying at present is not Socialism at all, but one variety of socialism, a sugary socialism without the spirit of idealism and without passion, with the ways of a paunchy official and of a substantial paterfamilias, a socialism without boldness or fierce enthusiasm, a devotee of statistics with its nose buried in friendly agreements with capitalism, a socialism which is preoccupied solely with reforms and which has sold its birthright for a mess of pottage, a socialism which in the eyes of the bourgeoisie is a throttle on the popular impatience and an automatic brake on proletarian audacity. (The Socialism Which Is Dying and the Socialism Which Must Be Reborn, Lausanne, 1915.)

What a superb description! Lenin called it the honest voice of a French Communist. People now ask: Is not modern revisionism precisely the "variety of socialism" which is dying? They will soon hear the resounding ring of the honest voices of innumerable Communists inside the Parties dominated by revisionism.

"A thousand sails pass by the shipwreck; ten thousand saplings shoot up beyond the withered tree." Bogus socialism is dying, whereas scientific socialism is bursting with youthful vigour and is advancing in bigger strides than ever. Revolutionary socialism with its vitality will overcome all difficulties and obstacles and advance step by step towards victory until it has won the whole world.

Let us wind up this article with the concluding words of the Communist Manifesto:

"The Communists disdain to conceal their views and aims. They openly declare that their ends can be attained only by the forcible overthrow of all existing social conditions. Let the ruling classes tremble at a communistic revolution. The proletarians have nothing to lose but their chains. They have a world to win.

"WORKING MEN OF ALL COUNTRIES, UNITE!"

Outline of Views on the Question of Peaceful Transition

A Written Outline Presented by the Delegation of the C.P.C. to the Central Committee of the C.P.S.U. on November 10, 1957

I. On the question of the transition from capitalism to socialism, it would be more flexible to refer to the two possibilities, peaceful transition and non-peaceful transition, than to just one, and this would place us in a position where we can have the initiative politically at any time.

1. Referring to the possibility of peaceful transition indicates that for us the use of violence is primarily a matter of self-defence. It enables the Communist Parties in the capitalist countries to sidestep attacks on them on this issue, and it is politically advantageous—advantageous for winning the masses and also for depriving the bourgeoisie of its pretexts for such attacks and isolating it.

2. If practical possibilities for peaceful transition were to arise in individual countries in the future when the international or domestic situation changes drastically, we could then make timely use of the opportunity to win the support of the masses and solve the problem of state power by peaceful means.

3. Nevertheless, we should not tie our own hands because of this desire. The bourgeoisie will not step down from the stage of history voluntarily. This is a universal law of class struggle. In no country should the proletariat and the Communist Party slacken their preparations for the revolution in any way. They must be prepared at all times to repulse counter-revolutionary attacks and, at the critical juncture of the revolution when the working class is seizing state power, to overthrow the bourgeoisie by armed force if it uses armed force to suppress the people's revolution

(generally speaking, it is inevitable that the bourgeoisie will do so).

II. In the present situation of the international communist movement, it is advantageous from the point of view of tactics to refer to the desire for peaceful transition. But it would be inappropriate to over-emphasize the possibility of peaceful transition. The reasons are:

1. Possibility and reality, the desire and whether or not it can be fulfilled, are two different matters. We should refer to the desire for peaceful transition, but we should not place our hopes mainly on it and therefore should not over-emphasize this aspect.

2. If too much stress is laid on the possibility of peaceful transition, and especially on the possibility of seizing state power by winning a majority in parliament it is liable to weaken the revolutionary will of the proletariat, the working people and the Communist Party and disarm them ideologically.

3. To the best of our knowledge, there is still not a single country where this possibility is of any practical significance. Even if it is slightly more apparent in a particular country, over-emphasizing this possibility is inappropriate because it does not conform with the realities in the overwhelming majority of countries. Should such a possibility actually occur in some country, the Communist Party there must on the one hand strive to realize it, and on the other hand always be prepared to repulse the armed attacks of the bourgeoisie.

4. The result of emphasizing this possibility will neither weaken the reactionary nature of the bourgeoisie nor lull them.

5. Nor will such emphasis make the social democratic parties any more revolutionary.

6. Nor will such emphasis make Communist Parties grow any stronger. On the contrary, if some Communist Parties should as a result obscure their revolutionary features and thus become confused with the social democratic parties in the eyes of the people, they would only be weakened.

7. It is very hard to accumulate strength and prepare for the revolution, and after all parliamentary struggle is easy in comparison. We must fully utilize the parliamentary form of struggle, but its role is limited. What is most important is to proceed with the hard work of accumulating revolutionary strength.

III. To obtain a majority in parliament is not the same as smashing the old state machinery (chiefly the armed forces) and establishing new state machinery (chiefly the armed forces). Unless the military-bureaucratic state machinery of the bourgeoisie is smashed, a parliamentary majority for the proletariat and their reliable allies will either be impossible (because the bourgeoisie will amend the constitution whenever necessary in order to facilitate the consolidation of their dictatorship) or undependable (for instance, elections may be declared null and void, the Communist Party may be outlawed, parliament may be dissolved, etc.).

IV. Peaceful transition to socialism should not be interpreted in such a way as solely to mean transition through a parliamentary majority. The main question is that of the state machinery. In the 1870s, Marx was of the opinion that there was a possibility of achieving socialism in Britain by peaceful means, because "at that time England was a country in which militarism and bureaucracy were less pronounced than in any other." For a period after the February Revolution, Lenin hoped that through "all power to the Soviets" the revolution would develop peacefully and triumph, because at that time "the arms were in the hands of the people." Neither Marx nor Lenin meant that peaceful transition could be realized by using the old state machinery. Lenin repeatedly elaborated on the famous saying of Marx and Engels, "The working class cannot simply lay hold of the ready-made state machinery and wield it for its own purposes."

V. The social democratic parties are not parties of socialism. With the exception of certain Left wings, they are parties serving the bourgeoisie and capitalism. They are a variant of bourgeois political parties. On the question of socialist revolution, our position is fundamentally different from that of the social democratic parties. This distinction must not be obscured. To obscure this distinction only helps the leaders of the social democratic parties to deceive the masses and hinders us from winning the masses away from the influence of the social democratic parties. However, it is unquestionably very important to strengthen our work with respect to the social democratic parties and strive to establish a united front with their Left and middle groups.

VI. Such is our understanding of this question. We do hold differing views on this question, but out of various considerations we did not state our views after the 20th Congress of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union. Since a joint declaration is to be issued, we must now explain our views. However, this need not prevent us from attaining common language in the draft declaration. In order to show a connection between the formulation of this question in the draft declaration and the formulation of the 20th Congress of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, we agree to take the draft put forward today by the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union as a basis, while proposing amendments in certain places.

International Communist Movement

Communist Party of Australia (Marxist-Leninist) Founded

DETERMINED to repudiate revisionist leadership, the Australian Marxist-Leninists have formed the Communist Party of Australia (Marxist-Leninist). This was announced by Vanguard (published by the Australian Marxist-Leninists) on March 24. (For full text of the statement see p.24.)

In the same issue, the newspaper carried a commentary denouncing Aarons, Dixon and Sharkey for their betrayal of the communist cause and for serving U.S. imperialism.

The commentary says: "A momentous decision was made when the Australian Communists recently repudiated Messrs. Aarons, Dixon and Sharkey as communist leaders and decided to carry forward the best traditions of the Australian communist and working-class movement under the name of the Communist Party of Australia (Marxist-Leninist).

"Aarons, Dixon and Sharkey have deserted the cause of communism altogether. They have become revisionists, that is, they have stripped the revolutionary essence from Marxism-Leninism.

"At the very moment when the main content of our times is the transition to socialism, these gentlemen assert that socialism will not be achieved for one hundred years or more. At the very moment of crisis of imperialism when the main imperialist — U.S. im-

Australian Marxist-Leninists' Statement

Australian Marxist-Leninists have recently met in conference. After full discussion, the conference decided to repudiate the leadership of Messrs. Aarons, Dixon and Sharkey and to reconstitute the Australian communist movement under the name of Communist Party of Australia (Marxist-Leninist). The documents of the conference (including the Party programme) will be published. The conference elected a central committee which elected as office bearers E.F. Hill (Chairman), P. Malone and C.L. O'Shea (Vice-Chairmen), and F. Johnson (Secretary). The newspaper Vanguard and the journal Australian Communist will publish the material of the Communist Party of Australia (M.L.).

perialism — is being defeated all over the world in its policies, its armed aggression against other countries and in every other way, these gentlemen play down the struggle against U.S. imperialism." The commentary adds that they support India backed as it is by U.S. imperialism in its attack on socialist China. They decry anyone who lifts up the banner of struggle against U.S. imperialism as repeating 'well-known truths' and being concerned only with wordy denunciations of imperialism and so on.

"They speak of significant relaxation of international tension at the very moment when U.S. imperialism is waging aggressive war in Southeast Asia, in the Congo, menacing Cyprus, operating its innumerable military bases throughout the world, spending record amounts on armaments.

"In other words, in the very terms of communism they serve U.S. imperialism, the very thing that imperialists need, the revisionists provide."

The commentary goes on to say: These gentlemen have repudiated Marxism-Leninism. They frown on anyone who even quotes Marx, Engels or Lenin, and say that it is phrase-mongering or it is abstract or it is not reality and that times have changed since Marx, Engels and Lenin wrote.

"They have publicly taken the initiative in attacking the Communist Parties of Albania and China despite the assertion in the 81 Parties Statement in its characterization of Yugoslav revisionism and its estimate that the main danger in the working-class movement is revisionism (capitalist ideas). In line with that, in Australia they have pursued a policy of holding back the working-class struggle."

"Instead of developing struggle and appropriate criticism of the reformist policy of containing the working class, they have become part of it in the interests of the so-called struggle against sectarianism, Leftism," the commentary says. "They thus help the monopoly capitalists."

"In the peace bodies, they have followed a policy of splitting and dividing, leading such bodies into purely pacifist channels, talking about peace in general and not the specific concrete struggle against the particular acts and threatened acts of aggression in the world today initiated above all by U.S. imperialism.

"On the all-important agrarian problem in Australia, they have long since abandoned a scientific socialist standpoint of basing themselves on the rural working class and small farmers. On the day-to-day questions of education, housing, roads, hospitals, they fail either to develop struggle or advance the socialist solution of these problems.

"They have destroyed the concept of organization of the Marxist-Leninist party — the Communist Party. They have attempted to use the very principles of organization of the Communist Party to attack Marxism-Leninism. Thus in the name of 'democratic centralism' and 'unity of the Party' and 'majority decision,' they have attempted to impose their anti-Marxist-Leninist policy on Marxist-Leninists and the Australian working class.

"But when Marxism-Leninism itself has been abandoned so has democratic centralism and all the other principles of Party organization. When Marxism-Leninism has been abandoned, the Communist Party has ceased to be a Communist Party except in name. It is the bounden duty of Marxist-Leninists to uphold Marxism-Leninism, the principles of scientific socialism. Marxism-Leninism is all powerful because it is true."

The Communist Party of Australia (M.L.), the commentary stresses, has formulated a programme for Australia's advance to socialism in strict accord with the scientific principles of Marxism-Leninism. It takes its place alongside the Marxist-Leninist Communist Parties of other countries. "Every advanced worker will evaluate the relative merits and demerits of Messrs. Aarons, Dixon and Sharkey as against the Communist Party of Australia (M.L.). We fear no debate, no abuse. Our position is all powerful because it is in accord with Marxism-Leninism, it is true. No allegation or accusation of splitting or being renegades no matter how often it is repeated can be sustained; on the contrary, it will help people to appraise the situation.

"Messrs. Aarons, Dixon and Sharkey have split from Marxism-Leninism, that is the real question. The Communist Party of Australia (M.L.), on the contrary, adheres to Marxism-Leninism. Who, then, are the real splitters? No lies, slanders, provocations, diversions can prevent the triumphant advance of the Australian working class to socialism."

New Triumph for National Independence Movement

by OUR CORRESPONDENT

THE Sixth Session of the Afro-Asian People's Solidarity Council, meeting in Algiers, capital of Algeria, on March 22-27, represents a triumph for the struggle against imperialism and colonialism. It demonstrates that the great historical tide of national independence and liberation cannot be checked by any force on earth.

Top priority was given at the meeting to the following topics: 1) The struggle against imperialist policies of war and aggression, and for liquidation of imperialist domination and complete national independence and the relaxation of international tension and world peace. 2) Effective ways and means for consolidating the Afro-Asian solidarity movement. 3) Concrete steps for assisting the liberation struggles and liquidating colonialism and neo-colonialism in Africa and Asia.

In addition to adopting a general declaration, a general political resolution and a series of other resolutions, the meeting decided to convene the fourth and fifth Afro-Asian People's Solidarity Conferences in Accra and Peking respectively.

On March 20, Premier Chou En-lai sent a message of greetings which was read at the opening session amid prolonged applause.

The keynote of the meeting was the struggle for complete national independence and against imperialism. Whether to persist in the revolutionary struggle or abandon it in favour of imperialism has a vital bearing on the future of the 1,700 million people of Africa and Asia. Questions on this subject were thrashed out by many delegates in their speeches.

The Only Correct Line

First, what line must be taken by the peoples of these two continents? Kuo Chien, head of the Chinese delegation, said in her speech: "From the experience gained in long years of struggle, the Afro-Asian peoples have found the only correct line for achieving complete independence, which consists in holding high the banner of opposing imperialism, and old and new colonialism, uniting all their people to wage resolute struggles in various forms, carrying the anti-imperialist and anti-colonialist revolution through to the end and striving for full political and economic independence and complete emancipation."

"However," she added, "a certain outside force has opposed this correct line which has the firm support of the overwhelming majority of the Afro-Asian peoples. It has been trying to impose on them an erroneous line which abstains from opposing imperialism and carrying out revolution. It spreads the nonsense that the Afro-Asian peoples' task of opposing imperialism and old and new colonialism has been completed, leaving only the insignificant remnants of colonialism, which, it says, imperialism and the United Nations under United States control in particular, may be relied upon to liquidate. . . . This erroneous line actually means that the oppressed nations must for ever suffer imperialist plunder and enslavement."

Kim Wal Ryong, head of the Korean delegation, stressed the need for the oppressed people to wage a resolute struggle. "We should not wait idly," he declared, "for the liquidation of the colonialist system through peaceful coexistence, complete and general disarmament or the United Nations, but should hold high the revolutionary banner of national liberation." Peaceful coexistence, he went on, cannot be applied to relations between the imperialists and the people of the colonies and dependent countries, nor can it take the place of the oppressed peoples' struggle for national independence and freedom.

Imperialism Wants No Peace

Speaking on the question of peace, many delegates took world reality into account. Algerian delegate Haddam Tedjini said: "Some people may ask: How do we reconcile our profound desire for the realization of peace throughout the world and our full support for all peoples fighting for their independence?" Just as President Ben Bella has stressed, he replied, there is no contradiction in this because if we want to fight for peace we must first make people free and independent.

N.A. Welbeck, head of the Ghanaian delegation, pointed out, "Today, whenever the people raise their voices for their right to freedom and liberty, the imperialists shoot them down. Yet they continue to talk of peace. If we want to safeguard peace we must, as a movement, have the determination to go all out in thoroughly destroying imperialism, colonialism and all new forms of political evils which do not want true peace."

On the need for the development of an independent national economy by the newly emerging Asian and African countries, the head of the Chinese delegation stressed: "It is impossible to build up an independent national economy without liquidating the imperialists' economic forces in one's own country and resisting their economic aggression."

"However," Kuo Chien declared, "a certain outside force argues that the principal and central task of the newly emerging countries consists purely of economic construction. This fallacious argument in reality seeks to write off the Afro-Asian peoples' present task of opposing imperialism and old and new colonialism and clears the way for economic aggression by new colonialism."

Who Are Racists?

Dwelling on the solid unity between the Afro-Asian peoples, the speaker showed that some people did not hesitate to invoke the most reactionary imperialist theory of "racism," slandering the Asian and African peoples' solidarity in the struggle against imperialism as being based on geographical principles, colour of skin and races. "This," she went on, "is an out-and-out fabrication made with ulterior motives. . . . It is nobody but these people, vainly trying to lord it over the Asian and African peoples, who are downright racists and the greatest splitters."

Dealing with the outstanding questions between the Asian and African countries, the head of the Chinese delegation drew attention to the fact that some people recently had deliberately confused the boundary questions left over by history between Asian and African countries with imperialist occupation of foreign territories by generally terming them as "territorial disputes" and describing them as the sole cause of war. This, she pointed out, was a most absurd and reactionary argument. "The Asian and African peoples will never allow the imperialists to occupy a single inch of their land," she emphasized.

The head of the Japanese delegation, Tokumatsu Sakamoto, also flayed those who play up the pretext of peaceful settlement of border disputes. "They lend themselves to assisting imperialist aggression, facilitating the maintenance of imperialist domination, interfering in the sovereignty of other countries and impeding the just struggle to recover the territory of one's motherland," he stated.

Two Important Documents

The outstanding achievements of the meeting found clear expression in the two important documents it passed, the General Declaration and the General Political Resolution.

The General Declaration makes it clear that the struggle for national liberation is the main task of the Afro-Asian peoples' movement and that no real peace can be achieved without the total liberation of Afro-Asian and other peoples.

The General Political Resolution calls upon all peoples of Asia, Africa and Latin America to raise high the anti-imperialist and anti-old and new colonialist banner, to unite with all anti-imperialist forces in the world to wage a resolute struggle through various forms until the complete independence, economic and social emancipation and total liquidation of imperialism, colonialism and neo-colonialism and the establishment of peace are finally realized.

Soviet Delegate Attacks China

In his speech on March 25, B.G. Gafurov, head of the Soviet delegation, tried to peddle the erroneous line of "peaceful coexistence" and "general and complete disarmament." Even more contemptible, he had the impudence to speak in the name of other Asian and African delegates. Not daring to touch upon the substantive questions concerning the two different lines raised by the Chinese delegation, he said: "The Soviet delegation was approached by many African and Asian delegates yesterday who asked us not to open a debate and reply to the speech made by the Chinese."

This provocative move evoked a wave of indignation throughout the meeting hall. A Tanganyikan delegate immediately rose and challenged Gafurov to name those who had asked him to speak in the name of the Asian and African delegates. Mohamed Yazid, chairman of the meeting and head of the Algerian delegation, said: "I am forced to insist on the principle that every delegation speaks in its own name and no delegation can speak in the name of another country."

Defeated in his disingenuous attempt, Gafurov held a press conference on March 27 immediately after the conclusion of the meeting. By outright falsification he sought to sabotage the Afro-Asian peoples' unity and irresponsibly attacked China.

Chinese Delegation's Statement

In refuting the Soviet delegate's calumnies, the Chinese delegation issued a statement the following day. The main points were: 1. The Soviet delegation had tried to impose on the Afro-Asian peoples its erroneous line of capitulation and division, to force the meeting to adopt a resolution in support of Khrushchov's proposal allegedly renouncing the use of force in settling territorial disputes and boundary questions and to furtively insert praise of the partial nuclear test ban treaty into the meeting's documents. However, all this failed. 2. In assisting the newly independent countries, the Soviet Union usually adopts an attitude of great-nation chauvinism and national selfishness. 3. It was a lie spread by the Soviet delegation that the Afro-Asian Economic Seminar would be held in the Soviet Union. 4. It was ridiculous for the Soviet delegation to deny the fact at his press conference that it had been decided to convene the fifth Afro-Asian People's Solidarity Conference in Peking.

New Upsurge of South Korean People's Patriotic Struggle

Following is a slightly abridged translation of a "Renmin Ribao" editorial of March 27, 1964, entitled "Support for the South Korean People's Patriotic Struggle." Subheads are ours.—Ed.

ONCE again the south Korean people's struggle against U.S. imperialism and its henchmen has broken out. Under American occupation and the fascist rule of special agents established by the Pak Jung Heui clique, tens of thousands of students have staged a massive demonstration in opposition to south Korea-Japan talks.

New High in Struggle

The huge demonstration marked a new high in the south Korean people's struggle against U.S. imperialism for national preservation. Since last winter workers, peasants, fishermen, students, intellectuals as well as industrialists and businessmen of small and medium-sized enterprises have been continuously fighting U.S. imperialism and the puppet Pak Jung Heui clique in many ways. Two-thirds of south Korea's organized workers, about 150,000, carried out a series of strikes and stubbornly fought American military authorities and the Pak Jung Heui band. Eight hundred thousand fishermen all over south Korea held meetings demanding that U.S. troops quit south Korea and that north and south unification be realized. The peasants, land hungry and battling for survival, also went into action. Young students, who played the main role in the uprising to overthrow Syngman Rhee, formed a students' union and took part in well-organized activities. In early March, a number of south Korea's opposition parties and political figures also formed an organization to oppose the traitorous diplomacy of the Pak Jung Heui gang. Today, in south Korea, people from all strata, all those with a sense of national self-respect, are pointing the spearhead of their struggle more directly against U.S. imperialism and its stooges.

The fact that the current struggles are centred around the south Korea-Japan talks is of great significance. Of late, Washington officials have followed one another in calling for an early agreement between south Korea and Japan. Since last winter when Johnson personally briefed Pak, both Robert Kennedy, as special envoy of the U.S. President, and Secretary of State Dean Rusk have visited Seoul. The communique on the Rusk-Pak talks openly called for an early agreement between south Korea and Japan. On Washington's instructions, Kim Jong Pil, one of Pak's men, was sent to Japan on March 20 to consult on the details of a deal that sells out Korean national interests. This deal is now being speeded up.

What Washington Is Up To

There are reasons for Washington's hurry to bring about an agreement between the puppet regime in south Korea and Japan. The great victory of the people in south Viet Nam against U.S. "special warfare"; the continued upsurge of the Japanese people's patriotic anti-U.S. struggle; the resolute resistance of the Laotian people against Washington's intervention policy; the just stand of Cambodia to safeguard its independence and sovereignty; the growing desire of some Asian countries to free themselves from U.S. control—all these have dealt heavy setbacks to the U.S. policy of aggression in Asia. In these circumstances, U.S. imperialism, by doing its utmost to realize an agreement in the south Korea-Japan talks, hopes that it may be able to consolidate its colonial rule over south Korea with the help of Japanese militarism, and later patch up a Northeast Asia military alliance as a prop for its aggression in Asia.

A Contradiction U.S. Cannot Solve

The prolonged occupation of south Korea by U.S. imperialism has brought untold misery to the people there. Now it is trying to impose new shackles on them through the south Korea-Japan talks. The U.S. policy has made the people of south Korea see more clearly that in order to realize the peaceful unification of their fatherland, the only way out is to fight U.S. imperialism tooth and nail. It can be predicted that as long as U.S. imperialism continues to work for its scheme of a Northeast Asia military alliance, as long as it continues to hang on in south Korea, the south Korean people's anti-U.S. struggle will rise to new heights. Events are running counter to the expectations of U.S. imperialism: the more frenzied it carries out aggression, the greater the struggle against it. This is a contradiction the aggressor cannot overcome.

The Chinese people firmly support the patriotic struggle of the students and people of south Korea whose political consciousness is rising daily. We believe that they will be further tempered in the flames of struggle and will achieve greater unity. In 1960, the heroic students and people of south Korea, by waging an unyielding struggle, overthrew Syngman Rhee, a lackey of U.S. imperialism. Having succeeded in overthrowing Rhee, if they close their ranks and persist in struggle they certainly can topple Pak Jung Heui as well, and finally drive out American imperialism.

We are convinced that the south Korean people eventually will win their patriotic anti-U.S. struggle and realize their aspiration for national unification.

"Malaysia" Scheme

China Supports the North Kalimantan People

Following is a translation of another "Renmin Ribao" editorial of March 27, 1964. The original appeared under the heading "Oppose 'Malaysia'—a Product of Neo-Colonialism, Support the Struggle of the North Kalimantan People." Subheads are ours.—Ed.

RECENTLY, with the blessings of U.S. imperialism, the British imperialists have stepped up armed suppression in North Kalimantan and resorted to military blackmail to threaten Indonesia, which firmly backs the people of North Kalimantan. These aggressive imperialist actions have aroused the people of North Kalimantan and Indonesia to great indignation and they are now carrying out a vigorous campaign against "Malaysia."

The "federation of Malaysia" which was knocked together last September is a neo-colonialist invention of the British imperialists, brought into being with the support of U.S. imperialism. The British colonialists sought to use this to continue their suppression of the national-liberation movement and to defend their colonial interests in the region. But from the outset, the people of the "Malaysian" areas saw through this subterfuge of neo-colonialism. A number of political parties and people's organizations in Malaya and Singapore have repeatedly issued statements, publicly denouncing the colonialist aims of the Malaysia project. The people of Brunei, Sarawak and North Borneo staged armed uprisings and set up the Revolutionary Government of the North Kalimantan Unitary State with Prime Minister A.M. Azahari at its head to oppose the scheme. Cooked up by British and U.S. imperialism, Malaysia is also a grave threat to the peace and security of Southeast Asia, and of Indonesia in particular. For this reason, the Indonesian Government and people have adopted a confrontation policy towards Malaysia and firmly supported the North Kalimantan people's struggle for national independence. Their stand and that of the North Kalimantan people is entirely just and warmly endorsed by the peace-loving people of Southeast Asia and the world.

U.S. Imperialism Plays a Dirty Role

U.S. imperialism has taken part at all stages and has played a treacherous role in this project. Prior to the forcible establishment of Malaysia, passing itself off as a supporter of "national self-determination" for the people in this area, it sent a "United Nations fact-finding mission" headed by an American named Laurence Michelmore to investigate. This mission refused to allow the Indonesian and Philippine observers to take part in its work and thus monopolized the so-called "United Nations investigation." In fact, it misrepresented the will of the people of North Borneo and Sarawak, and helped British imperialism to cover up the deceptive nature of "Malaysian independence" so as to mitigate local opposition and that of world public opinion. Not long ago, the U.S. Government, again posing as a "peace-maker," ostentatiously sent Attorney-General Robert Kennedy to Southeast Asia to "mediate" in the "dispute" between Indonesia and Malaysia. While so "mediating," Robert Kennedy openly threatened Indonesia with the possibility of armed intervention. He asserted that the problem might lead to a war in which the U.S. would be involved, because of its "treaty obligations in this area." Meanwhile, Washington also threatened the suspension of U.S. "aid" and the planned extension of the operations of the 7th Fleet into the Indian Ocean in a vain attempt to force the people of North Kalimantan and Indonesia to bow to its will. President Johnson exchanged U.S. support of British colonial policy in the Malaysian areas for British support of U.S. aggressive war in south Viet Nam. All this shows that U.S. imperialism ranges itself on the side of the British colonialists and uses deception and blackmail to achieve the common goal of suppressing the national-liberation movement.

Independence Through Armed Struggle

Imperialism has always adopted the dual tactics of "peace" and war against the peoples. This is nothing new. No matter which tactic it adopts, its aim is to force the people to abandon struggle and surrender. But these imperialist tactics can no longer intimidate and deceive the peoples of the world. They have learnt that only by waging resolute struggle against imperialism can they defeat its suppression with violence and only by dealing telling blows can they force it to consider seriously the will of the people at the conference table. In a recent interview with the Antara correspondent, Mangol, Foreign Minister and Chief Representative of the Revolutionary Government of the North Kalimantan Unitary State to Djakarta said: "Only by waging revolutionary armed struggle can the North Kalimantan people win their independence and sovereignty." His words show that the North Kalimantan people through their own experience know fully well that any "independence" bestowed upon them by imperialism is not reliable and that their desire for real national self-determination can only be realized through waging a resolute armed struggle against the imperialists. The North Kalimantan people's armed forces are not very powerful at the moment, and their struggle will be a prolonged, arduous and complex one. However, with the support of the broad masses, they are bound to gather strength and will deal crushing blows at the enemy, so long as they persist in struggle, correctly sum up their experience in the struggle and learn from those of other oppressed nations. The brilliant victories of the people of south Viet Nam in recent years in resisting the armed aggression of U.S. imperialism provide an excellent example.

The struggle of the North Kalimantan people for national independence is in complete accord with the principle of national self-determination laid down at the Bandung Conference. It is entirely justified for the people in this area to take up arms to resist the ruthless suppression of the British imperialists and their followers. The Chinese people are following with respect and admiration the course of this heroic struggle. They firmly support it and regard it as an important and integral part of the fight against imperialism and old and new colonialism that is being waged by the world's peoples. The Chinese people also resolutely support the just stand of the Indonesian Government and people against Malaysia. Together with the people of Indonesia and North Kalimantan, they are ready to carry to the end the common struggle to uphold the Bandung spirit, defend peace in South-east Asia and crush all neo-colonialist schemes.

communication equipment, and machine spare-parts and accessories.

On the same day, Vice-Premier Li Hsien-nien received the Hungarian delegation.

Tribute to P.L.A. Heroes

Press and radio are telling the story of how Ouyang Hai, a squad leader of the People's Liberation Army, gave his life to save a train from being derailed.

During field training last November, Ouyang Hai was marching with his unit when he saw a startled horse carrying a gun mount get into the way of a fast approaching train. He jumped forward and just managed to get the horse off the track. He saved the train with its passengers but he himself was struck by it and killed.

Chu Teh, Chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress; Tung Pi-wu, Vice-Chairman of the People's Republic of China; Marshal Ho Lung and other leaders are among those who have paid tribute to Ouyang Hai's spirit and described him as a "great communist fighter." They have called on officers and men of the the P.L.A. to "learn from his lofty spirit of self-sacrifice and unqualified devotion in serving the people."

Ouyang Hai's name is only one of the many on the P.L.A.'s roll of honour of individuals or units who have devotedly served the people and the revolutionary cause. Hsieh Chen of an artillery company laid down his life while helping the people of a village escape the onrushing waters of a flood last year. The Sixth Company of a P.L.A. unit was known for its military skill, discipline and courage in combat during the war years. Since 1949 it has continued to carry forward the great traditions of the P.L.A. and constantly put Chairman Mao Tse-tung's teachings into practice. It has been an exemplary unit in every respect.

For these distinguished services, the Ministry of Defence recently issued three orders. The first gave the title "Ouyang Hai Squad" to the P.L.A. squad of which the late Ouyang Hai was leader. The second posthumously awarded the title "A Model of Love and Regard for the People" to Hsieh Chen, and named his squad the "Hsieh Chen Squad" in his honour, while the third gave the Sixth Company the title of honour: "Indomitable Sixth Company."

Another Revelation of Indian Expansionism

by WANG LIN

RECENT events in India have cast further light on who is behind the anti-China activities of the Tibetan rebels. On March 9, these rebels, who all along have been shielded by the Indian Government, issued a statement in the name of the Dalai Lama, viciously slandering the Chinese Government and people and aimed at stirring up rebellion in Tibet. Published in great length by the official Indian press agency, the full text of the statement was broadcast by the U.S. Information Service.

On the same day, Minister Without Portfolio Shastri declared in the Indian parliament that the Dalai Lama had been functioning "more or less" in accordance with Indian government policy and that there was no bar to the Dalai's activities. On March 10, Shastri told parliament that the Indian Government would discuss with the Tibetan rebel clique the "details" of the Dalai's intended "visit" to Buddhist countries in Southeast Asia.

Although Shastri dared not go on to state clearly New Delhi's policy the facts have long provided the answer.

Interference in China's Internal Affairs

Five years ago, the rebellion of the reactionary clique of Tibet's upper social strata, engineered and supported by the Indian Government, met with ignominious defeat. Since then, New Delhi has been using Tibetan rebels who fled to India to carry on subversive activities against China.

The Chinese Government on many occasions has protested to the Indian Government, asking it to stop interfering in China's internal affairs. New Delhi has reiterated many times that it will not allow the Tibetan rebels as "a kind of emigre government" to "conduct political activities [in India] against another country." But this is an outright lie. Actually the rebels have been allowed to conduct open anti-China acts as an "emigre government," not only in India, but in other countries as well.

Since last year, the Indian Government has taken further steps in encouraging and directing Tibetan rebels to go to some European countries as "representatives" of the Dalai Lama or as "Tibetan refugees" to conduct anti-China activities, with a view to undermining China's relations with these countries. Now, to sow discord in friendly relations between China and Southeast Asian countries, the Nehru government is openly instigating the Dalai Lama to operate outside India. All this is part of New Delhi's anti-China campaign in collusion with U.S. imperialism.

Tibet is an integral part of Chinese territory. The Tibetan rebels taking refuge in India are only a handful of notorious serf-owners thrown out by the Tibetan people. And it is solely China's internal affair that the Tibetan people have rid themselves of ruthless oppression. For the Indian Government to go back on its repeated assurances and openly support the Tibetan rebels shows that it still harbours expansionist designs on Tibet. The Tibetan rebels simply are an Indian government tool.

India's Idle Dreams

In protest against New Delhi's stepped-up operations against China, the Chinese Ministry of Foreign Affairs delivered a note to the Indian Embassy on March 23.

"India still maintains diplomatic relations with China," the note said, "and yet the Indian Government has supported the fugitive Tibetan rebel clique in India in its activities against the motherland. This is a grave action on the part of the Indian Government, constituting out-and-out interference in China's internal affairs and violation of principles governing international relations. The Chinese Government hereby lodges a strong protest with the Indian Government against this action."

"The Chinese Government seriously warns the Indian Government once again that interference in China's internal affairs is absolutely intolerable and that, like the fugitive Tibetan serf-owners' dream of a comeback, the Indian Government's dream of expansion is doomed to be shattered," the note added.

"The Chinese Government," the note concluded, "once again asks the Indian Government to fulfil its promise in earnest, respect the minimum standards of international relationships and immediately stop supporting the Tibetan rebels and cease its interference in China's internal affairs."

The Indian Government has already become isolated as a result of lining up with U.S. imperialism in its anti-China campaign. But, refusing to accept the lesson, it is intensifying its anti-China moves by continued use of the Tibetan rebels. This, however, will come to grief too. It will only serve to reveal the Indian Government's designs.

South Korean Demonstrations

Feeling Runs High

Mass demonstrations against the Pak Jung Heui clique which rules with the help of American bayonets have been sweeping south Korea. The first demonstrations erupted in Seoul on the afternoon of March 24. Thousands of university students—later joined by many other people—broke through police cordons to march to the government building where they demanded an end to the current south Korea-Japan talks which betray the national interests of the Korean people.

Pak Jung Heui, Wall Street's latest hatchet man in south Korea, returned post-haste to Seoul from Taegu to deal with the situation. The army was called out. Helmeted police and armed soldiers wearing gas masks charged the demonstrators, hurling teargas bombs. The students fought back with stones and bare fists. Many were arrested. Despite fascist terror the struggle assumed even greater proportions in the next few days.

The students of Pusan and Taegu, the second and third largest cities in south Korea, followed Seoul's lead. So did those of many more cities, including students as far south as Cheju Island. Rallies and demonstrations were held and sit-down strikes staged. The situation is so fraught with danger—for Washington—that it is likened by UPI to the April days of 1960 when students rose to topple Syngman Rhee, the first of a brood of south Korean stooges groomed by the United States since World War II.

The south Korea-Japan talks, held at the insistence of the U.S. imperialists, started in February 1952. They have not been concluded because of opposition from the people of Japan as well as from the people of Korea. On March 27, four and a half million Japanese workers took part in a united action throughout the country to demonstrate their opposition to the talks. Both the Japanese and Korean peoples oppose this projected concord under American auspices because they recognize it as a move to knock together an aggressive Northeast Asia military alliance, revive Japanese militarism in south Korea, block the peaceful unification of north and south Korea and perpetuate American control.

In face of the popular storm the puppet national assembly in Seoul wilted. It decided on March 26 to ask the Pak Jung Heui clique to terminate the talks being held in Tokyo. Pak Jung Heui himself, scared stiff by the angry waves of demonstrations and mindful of Syngman Rhee's fate, as a gesture recalled the chief of the south Korean delegation and at the same time tightened police and other measures. But what happened in 1960 may yet happen again.

Yugoslav Economy

In a Bad Way

Food prices vie with the weather as a topic of conversation these days in Belgrade and other cities of Tito-land where lip-service is given to socialism to cover up the results of the restoration of capitalism. The rise in the cost of living which ranges from foodstuffs to furniture, from clothes to cigarettes, has increased the cares of worrying housewives. The situation has worsened so much of late that the Central Committee of the Yugoslav League of Communists found it necessary to discuss the matter at length at its 6th plenary meeting on March 16. Of the 12 speakers whose speeches were published, nine were constrained to take up the economic theme, in an effort to allay popular discontent by the airing of views on the fast falling living standards.

Conditions are worst in farm produce. Index, a monthly, writes in its January issue that retail prices for farm produce were up 62 per cent as compared with 1959. Official figures show that retail grain prices in 1963 were 17 per cent higher than in the previous year; meat was up 19 per cent, eggs, 15 per cent and milk, 13 per cent. Politika, another Yugoslav journal, said on February 15 that the long list of soaring prices for the last few months included those for building supplies and raw materials. It lamented that the rising prices "developed in a chain," that is costs rose at every stage right up to the appearance of the finished products in the shops. The burden thus falls on the working man.

Half of the Yugoslav workers earn less than 25,000 dinars a month. The jack-up of prices, Yugoslav officials have to admit, has made it difficult for workers to maintain their families. That is why more strikes have recently been reported. These struggles were waged not merely for better living conditions but against the policies of the Tito clique. Discontent has been widespread. When ordinary workers struck they were joined by members of workers' councils, trade union leaders and even members of Tito's League of Communists. Edvard Kardelj, Tito's righthand man, recently noted that there are many indications of dissatisfaction among the workers.

Writing on the "serious difficulty" in which Yugoslavia finds itself the New York Times on March 11 said, "The price spiral has caused so much unhappiness that President Tito felt obliged to comment on it while visiting the city of Nis last Saturday." The paper reported that the leader of the modern revisionist clique in Yugoslavia has decided to "build less imposing and magnificent buildings" and introduce changes in the economy, such as "a quieter rate of development" and so on, "for raising the standard of living." But the difficulties confronting Yugoslavia arise not from the reasons given by Tito at Nis but from something more fundamental, from the capitalist system that is being rebuilt in Yugoslavia and the policies it is pursuing as a hanger-on of U.S. imperialism.
